Dickinson Slain When He Fought In Hold-up Trap

Girl in Gay Party Breaks First and Tells of Robbery Scheme.

Schweitzer Admits Doing the Shooting

Four Jailed in Detroit All Involved Now in Deadly Frame-up.

By the United Press.

Detroit, July 1.—William C. Schweitzer tonight confessed formally to police that he had robbed and murdered Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, last Wednesday night. Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea made this announcement.

Dickinson was a nephew by marriage of Charles Evans Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court.

The 26-year-old underworld figure, confronted with the "confession" of one of his women companions on the death party, dropped his show of bravado, admitted three previous confessions were fabrications and told authorities the story of the bizarre slaying of the lawyer who came here on business of his New York firm.

"It was a case of cold, premeditated murder," McCrea said.

"The story Schweitzer told this time tallies with all the known facts. He admitted the crime was pre-arranged and that the motive was robbery.

Girls Also Accused.

"The three party girls all were in on it.

"Schweitzer had had the murder pistol for about seven or eight months. The women were in the rear seat of the car when Dickinson was shot. Schweitzer shot him twice. Then he stripped the coat and vest from the dying man's body and threw them to the girls.

"'See what you can find in that!' he said.

"They found about $150.

"Schweitzer said he threw his pistol in some bushes near Chicago. He admitted leaving the murder car in a Chicago garage."

The three girls, who were in the murder car, are Loretta and Florence Jackson and Jean Miller. All are held by police.

Jean Miller was the one who broke down and confessed today—a confession that led to Schweitzer's final statement. She protested against the plan to shoot Dickinson.

"Can't you just tap him on the head?" she suggested to Schweitzer.

"I shot him once in the car and then pulled him out on the ground and shot him again—in the head," Schweitzer said.

The three girls and Dickinson and Schweitzer left a hotel room where they had been drinking Wednesday night. Schweitzer had decided the time for the robbery had arrived. They drove Dickinson to Rouge Park. The girls left the automobile by pre-arranged signal for a few minutes and then returned.

The murderer said the Jackson sisters told him about the supposedly large sum of money carried by the attorney. Then he and the sisters planned the robbery last Tuesday night after Dickinson had been at their table in the dining room of the Book-Cadillac Hotel and offered to buy a drink.

Lawyer for Girls Arrives.

The Miller girl did not come in on the plans until the next night. Schweitzer had arranged for one of the girls to ask him to stop the machine as they reached a lonely spot in Rouge Park.

He said he was forced to shoot Dickinson when the lawyer resisted him and tried to seize the weapon.

After the shooting, Schweitzer said, one of the women looked at the prostrate form of the attorney and remarked:

"Well. It served him right."

Soon after the confession was recorded police brought in Loretta Jackson for questioning. An attorney, who identified himself as John Bucerzan, appeared at headquarters and said he had been retained by relatives of the Jackson girls to represent them.

McCrea said that Schweitzer would be arraigned before Judge Thomas W. Cutter on a murder warrant tomorrow morning.

While the confession implicated the three girls in the robbery, there

Lodges New and Vigorous Protest on Alleged Armed Invasion.

Moscow, July 1 (U.P.).—A new and vigorous protest against recent incidents along the border of Siberia and the Japan-sponsored empire of Manchukuo was lodged with the Japanese government in Tokyo tonight by the Russian government.

The Soviet protest said that Russia holds Japan directly responsible for the incidents.

The note, already delivered in Tokyo, warned that "grave consequences to Russo-Japanese relations" might result from the incidents which consist of alleged "invasions" of Siberia by Japanese and Manchukuo troops.

The note said that Japan would be held directly responsible for future violation of Soviet territory by these troops.

The alleged "invasions" occasioning Moscow's sharpest warning to Tokyo in more than a year occurred when Japanese and Manchukuoan troops, according to Soviet officers of the Far Eastern Red Army, crossed the Amur River into Siberia.

While three reported "invasions" have been widely discussed for several days, the Soviet protest, delivered to the Japanese foreign office by Konstantin Yurenev, Russian ambassador to Tokyo, lists eight recent incidents.

The incidents cover occasions on which either Japanese-Manchu troops or Japanese naval vessels violated Soviet territory or territorial waters.

After outlining the alleged incidents the protest said:

"Believing these facts are pregnant with grave consequences to our relations, the Soviet government has authorized me to protest the behavior of Japanese-Manchurian military authorities, responsibility for which must be borne by the Japanese government.

"I am also authorized to inform

Liquor Plot Jury Frees 3, Convicts 20

Prosecutor, Wray, Maxey Acquitted of Franklin County Conspiracy.

Defense Counsel Asks New Trial; Sentence Date Set July 9.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 1.—The Franklin County liquor conspiracy trial ended today with the acquittal of Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Carter Lee, Will Wray, of Henry, and Howard L. Maxey, of Ferrum, and the conviction of the rest of the 23 defendants. The jury received the case Saturday.

Judge John Paul postponed sentence until July 9.

Ending one of the most sensational trials in the history of western Virginia, the jury reached its verdict after hearing for 49 days the testimony of some 300 witnesses. The trial started April 22.

Charging that a conspiracy existed in Franklin County to violate the internal revenue laws, the Government sought to prove untaxed liquor had been made and sold and that officers had given protection to law violators.

Those Guilty.

Found guilty were Samuel O. White, former Federal prohibition investigator who was suspended from the alcohol tax unit in West Virginia pending the trial; Edgar A. Beckett, Callaway, former State prohibition inspector; Deputy Sheriff Hentry T. Abshire, of Boone Mill; David A. Nicholson, of Ferrum, former member of the Virginia General Assembly; Jack Bess, Earl Easter and Charles Guilliams, all of Roanoke; Leonard Davis, of Martinsville; Willard R. Hodges, of Glade Hill; T. Roosevelt Smith, Walter (Peg) Hatcher, C. P. (Cap) Griffith, all of near Ferrum; John and Walter Turner, brothers, and Martin and J. O. Shively, of Rocky Posey Jones, all of Henry; Clifford Mount; Wilson Nicholson and Claude Shiveley, of Ferrum, and Tom Cooper, of Calloway.

Asks New Trial.

John W. Carter, jr., of Danville, one of the battery of defense attorneys, moved that the verdict be set aside and a new trial granted on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the law and evidence and that admissions were made over defense objections.

Lee, who is the grand-nephew of Robert E. Lee, in a brief statement declared the charges against him were "founded in political prejudice" and "anger on the part of criminals whom I prosecuted in their attempt to get vengeance." He became Commonwealth's attorney in 1928 and is a candidate to succeed himself in the forthcoming election.

The disposition of seven individuals and a corporation pleading nolo contendere and a quartet who pleaded guilty will be made known at the hearing July 9, Judge Paul said.

1,500 Children Flee Palisades Park Fire

Midway Destroyed by Blaze in Midst of Excursion.

By the Associated Press.

Palisade, N. Y., July 1.—Fire swept through the Palisades Amusement Park late today at the height of a day's outing for 1,500 New York children.

The flames destroyed most of the Midway, but all of the children, police said, were led to safety.

Jack Rosenthal, manager of the park, leased it two weeks ago from Nicholas Schenck, theater and film magnate, who had bought it at auction in May out of sentiment's sake—it was where Schenck began his climb in the entertainment world.

The fire, origin undetermined, broke out in the Old Mill in Lovers' Lane, a water ride built in a squat structure high up on the palisades opposite New York.

The flames licked up the sides of the dry timbers and their covering and, moved by a brisk river wind from the Hudson, raged down the Midway.

Boy, 11, Mysteriously Shot While He Plays in Sandpile

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 1.—Eleven-year-old Edmund Sinsko, mysteriously wounded as he played in a sandpile near his home at Magnolia, Md., was brought to the Johns Hopkins Hospital late today facing possible blindness from a load of buckshot discharged in his face.

Sheriff Granville Boyle, of Harford County, and State police are investigating the shooting. Steve Sinsko, Edmund's brother, who was near, said that the charge was fired from a woods across the road.

He said he carried Edmund on his back to a nearby filling station, where an automobile was obtained to rush the lad here.

Relatives could give no reason for the shooting.

Scorching Weather Assails Middle West

Kansas City, July 1 (A.P.).—Temperatures somewhat reminiscent of 1934's scorching record-breakers were general for the first time this year in Middle America today.

It was the "hottest day of the year" in Chicago, with 82, and in Lincoln, Nebr., with 92. Kansas City had 94.

Hopkins Gets $142,245,875, CWA Revived

Washington Is Allotted $2,000,000 for Work Relief.

Remainder Will Go to New York City and Three States.

By Felix Bruner.

The first step in the new plan to turn a major part of the works program into a set-up exactly like the old CWA was taken yesterday when the allotment board recommended to President Roosevelt that $142,245,875 be turned over to Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, to spend in three States, New York City and the District of Columbia.

The money will be spent directly by State and city works administrators responsible to Hopkins without the necessity for clearing the projects through the elaborate machines set up Washington at the beginning of the program.

Allotments similar to those recommended yesterday are expected to be made for each of the States. Under this plan many millions of dollars, possibly approaching half the $4,000,000,000 works fund, will be turned over to Hopkins. The money will be spent on thousands of small projects where material cost will be very low or where there will be no material involved.

It is estimated that the allotments made yesterday will put 169,900 persons to work for one year at an average cost of $812 per person for labor and materials. Of the total amount allotted approximately 3 per cent will go for administrative expense.

	Administration expense.	Work cost.
Dist. of Col....	$88,000	$1,959,043
New York City.	2,350,000	78,657,310
Alabama	305,000	10,196,346
Georgia	300,000	10,256,600
Indiana	1,110,000	37,052,973

Allen in Charge Here.

In each instance, complete plans have been worked out by works progress officials and these plans have been submitted as a whole to Hopkins and to the allotment board. President Roosevelt has referred to both the Indiana and the Alabama plans as models. Many of those to be put to work under the new arrangement already are working on FERA jobs. These jobs will merely be turned over to the works administration.

In the District, Commissioner George Allen, who is also works progress administrator, will have charge. About 2,400 persons would be put to work in the District on the basis of the $812 average, but the number may be somewhat smaller because higher wages will be paid here than in the South. Allen was in New York yesterday attending a regional meeting of works directors. He has not revealed the details of the District plan.

District officials said that the District will be ready to start the transfer of unemployed from direct relief to works by July 15. The projects include sewer and highway improvements, which are designed so that most of the expenditures will be for wages.

5,000 Unemployable.

It has been estimated by Commissioner Allen that from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 will be expended in the next year on projects which will give employment to 16,000 persons. Approxamately 5,000 persons who are listed as unemployable will remain on direct relief. The entire District works program will be in operation by October 1, according to Allen's plans.

Storm at Sea Claims Realtor, Sons Who Tried to Save Him

Robert Ames Washed Off Ketch in Mid-Atlantic While Racing for Norway; Two Plunge After Parent and Perish With Him.

Boston, July 1.—Robert Russell Ames, socially prominent Boston realtor, and his two sons, Richard Glover Ames and Henry Russell Ames, drowned when their 55-foot ketch, Hamrah, participant in the race from Newport to Norway, was hit by a storm in mid-Atlantic, according to word reaching here late today.

Robert Weed, of Milton, Sheldon Ware, of Boston, and Charles Foster Tillinghast, of Providence, three other members of the Hamrah's amateur crew, brought the battered ketch into Sydney, Nova Scotia, today, and sent home word of the tragedy.

The wife and mother of the drowned yachtsmen is en route by steamer from Boston to Norway, where she was to have met her husband and sons.

Ames was the son of James Barr Ames, a former dean of Harvard Law School, and of Susan Russell Ames. Richard, the older son, was graduated from Harvard recently, and Henry, known as Harry, had just completed his sophomore year.

The story of the drownings, pieced together from somber telegrams from the three survivors, was a poignant tale of how the elder Ames was washed overboard and how one son and then the other lost his life in rescue attempts that were doomed from the start.

The weather was such that the craft's boom and mainsail were torn away.

When the father was carried overboard, Richard tied a rope around his waist, fastened it to the ketch, and swam toward where his father was struggling. The rope was too short. Richard cast it off and kept swimming.

Harry then pushed out into the seething seas in a tender in an attempt to rescue his father and brother. The small boat capsized in the heavy swells and all three men were lost.

ISAAC GOLDENBERG.

Heart Ailment Fatal to Head Of D. C. Store

Isaac Goldenberg, 62, president of Goldenberg & Co.'s Department Store, and one of Washington's leading merchants, died yesterday afternoon in Emergency Hospital of heart disease.

About ten days ago Mr. Goldenburg suffered an acute heart attack and was taken to the hospital.

Born in Ketrich, Germany, Mr. Goldenberg came to the United States as a young man. He went to Baltimore, where he worked for Goldenberg Bros., a department stroe operated by his uncles.

He came to Washington 38 years ago to work for another uncle, Moses Goldenberg, founder of the present Goldenberg store. Through the decades preceding the World War he learned the clothing and furnishing business.

The hansom cab gave way to the first snorting automobiles, and styles and ways of living changed, as did styles of shopping. Mr. Goldenberg saw business grow and kept abreast of the times.

Mr. Goldenberg later left his uncle's store and founded his own furniture company, which bore his name.

When the estate of Moses Goldenberg sold Goldenberg & Co.'s Department Store in November, 1932, Mr. Goldenberg was one of the purchasers. He became its president, the post he held at the time of his death.

Mr. Goldenberg was a Mason and a Shriner. He belonged to the Washington Hebrew Congregation and the Board of Trade.

Surviving Mr. Goldenberg are his wife, Mrs. Helen G. Goldenberg; a daughter, Mrs. Louise Baum; a son, Alan Goldenberg, an infant grandchild and two brothers, Joseph Wide Changes in Title 2 Are Voted by Glass Sub-Committee.

Revisions Irksome To Administration

Expected to Rally Forces in Behalf of Better Provisions.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Having made sweeping revisions in the Eccles banking bill, the Glass Banking and Currency sub-committee yesterday appeared well on the way toward obtaining unanimous support from the full Senate Banking and Currency Committee for a measure which it can be said authoritatively is unsatisfactory to the monetary officials of the Administration.

The extent to which the Glass subcommittee revised Title II of the Eccles bill caused general surprise. The committee restricted, curtailed or refused virtually every new power which Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board asked for that agency. Title II contains the controversial provisions originally designed to centralize control over credit and money in the Reserve Board.

Fight Is Predicted.

Just as surprising, however, were statements from Senators Duncan U. Fletcher (Demrocrat), of Florida, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, and Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, intimating that the revised bill, with one or two minor changes, would be unanimously approved today by the full committee.

Indeed, it was reported that the full committee had completed its consideration of the revised bill late yesterday afternoon and made only one change of any importance in it. A vote of approval, however, was withheld until today in order to give several members of the committee an opportunity further to study the measure.

This apparent harmony over the revised bill, however, may be dissipated by noon today. It is known that Administration officials were chagrined by the changes made by the Glass sub-committee and it is assumed that they will undertake to rally their forces in the Senate committee in behalf of a bill more to their liking.

Provisions Missing.

If the Administration can force a division in the Senate committee over the revised bill, their hand will be strengthened in seeking changes when the measure reaches the Senate floor. But should the committee, numbering among its members virtually all the Senate banking authorities, unanimously approve the Glass measure, the Administration will have a difficult time justifying changes in the Senate, it is contended.

The Glass sub-committee, which made its report to the full committee yesterday after working on the measure since January, did not attempt to amend the Eccles bill as passed by the House. Instead, it completely re-wrote the measure and in doing so the Glass sub-committee approved a Title II which bore little resemblance to Title II in the House measure.

When the job was done Title II covered nine pages of the bill, instead of 14 pages as in the House measure. Missing were the provisions in the House measure setting up a new objective for Federal Reserve system operations, authority to the board to define eligibility requirements, provisions changing the existing law in respect to collateral for note issue, establishment of a pension system for Reserve Board members and several less important provisions.

Salient provisions in the revised draft of Title II were:

U. S. Transfers $100,000,000 'Gold Profits'

Treasury to Use Fund in Step to Retire Bank Notes, Redeem Bonds.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury yesterday shifted $100,000,000 of gold profits to its "working balance" in preparation for redeeming a big block of Government bonds and withdrawing all national bank notes from circulation.

In all, some $600,000,000 in the bonds and an approximately equivalent amount in bank notes are involved. Officials said they expected several months would pass before all the bonds had been presented for redemption and all the notes retired.

Although the process amounted to paying off Government obligations with money made by reducing the dollar's gold content, officials said no inflation was involved because of the disappearance of the bank notes. They will be replaced largely by Federal Reserve notes.

The bonds the Treasury is buying in are Panama Canal loan securities issued in 1916 and 1918. They bear what is known as the "circulating privilege."

Basis for Issues.

This means that national banks may deposit them with the Treasury, add 5 per cent in lawful money as a redemption fund and issue bank notes to the extent of the face value of the bonds.

Aside from the Canal Loan bonds connected with the transaction which began today, other Government securities to the extent of but $300,000,000 bear the "circulating privilege." Their life will end a month hence and consequently national bank notes will disappear completely.

Their elimination was part of a move to simplify the Nation's monetary system and will leave to all intents and purposes but two kinds of paper money in circulation—Federal Reserve notes and silver certificates issued by the Treasury. There is in addition a small amount outstanding in Federal Reserve bank notes.

The transfer of gold profits to the working cash balance with which the Treasury meets current expenses wa sthe first such transaction since the dollar's content was

Groups in Senate Line Up for Fight

Conservative, Liberal Blocs Plan Moves on Utilities Bill.

By Robert G. Albright.

Disregarding a flat injunction from the President, an overwhelmingly Democratic House yesterday bolted the Administration on a volatile power issue—outright dissolution for "unnecessary" utility holding companies.

The "death sentence" was rejected by a decisive 216-to-146 teller vote, following the bitterest "battle of lobbies" in recent House history.

The Administration may attempt to retrieve its losses today by a roll-call vote on substitution of the Senate bill and its "death sentence" features. But few leaders were optimistic over the outcome. The 70-vote margin by which the section was defeated yesterday, generally was believed to have sealed its fate.

Roosevelt to Fight.

President Roosevelt was silent in the face of defeat, but word was passed out by the White House secretariat that the fight would go on. Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, hurriedly conferred with the President after the vote. Later he served notice on House recalcitrants that a reckoning may come on today's roll-call vote.

Embittered over the outcome, Senate liberals immediately seized on the power issue as a rallying point in the 1936 campaign and threatened defeat of any holding company legislation that fails to carry the dissolution clause.

"Senate conferees will never yield on the 'death sentence,' said Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, co-author of the utility holding company bill. "I would rather see the bill die in conference than consent to the House provisions. Unless the 'death sentence' prevails, I doubt there will be any bill passed at this session of Congress."

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, said simply:

"It means that the power issue will be paramount in the 1936 campaign."

But even while liberals were planning a conference hold-out, a conservative movement was under way in the Senate to prevent the measure from even going to conference, through a motion to concur in the House amendments.

Slim Margin.

A motion to concur, under Senate rules, takes precedence over a motion to ask for a conference. The "death sentence" originally was written into the Senate bill by a margin of only one vote. Given another try, some Senators believe, the chamber would accept the House modification.

Galleries packed to the rafters, lobbies alive alike with representatives of utility interests and Administration workers seeking to head off defeat, and a floor filled with meditative members silently determined to break with their President on an issue that might cost their political careers tensely awaited the result of the vote.

Representative John G. Cooper (Republican), Ohio, telling off votes against the amendment, made a miscue. He counted only 131 heads. Representative Edward C. Eicher (Democrat), Iowa, telling votes for the "death sentence," counted 146. There was fidgety suspense until Cooper corrected his error. The "no" vote, he announced, was 216. A splitting yell, mingled with "boos" from the defeated, resounded in the chamber.

House Democratic leadership was sharply split in the polling. Although no record tabulation is kept of a teller vote, Speaker Joseph

All Records Broken, 2 Brothers Land After 27 Days in the Air

By the Associated Press.

Meridian, Miss., July 1.—Fred and Al Key brought their plane, Ole Miss, to a safe landing at 7:06 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today after breaking all existing endurance flying records by spending almost a month in the air.

A roar went up from 10,000 throats as the brothers made a perfect landing on the soggy field 27 days, 5 hours and 34 minutes after their take-off on June 4.

"It's been a hard old fight," said Fred.

"I'm telling you it isn't any fun, but we're both happy now," added Al.

J. D. Sellers, Mississippi governor for the National Aeronautical Association, directing official of the flight, immediately wired the association in Washington that a new record had been established. He removed the plane's barograph, an instrument showing minimum and maximum altitude, and said it was in perfect condition.

The brothers were freshly dressed and cleanly shaven as they stepped from the plane, but their hair had grown "wild" during their "residence" of almost a month in the sky. They headed for a hotel to sleep.

The official world's record for sustained flying, set at 553 hours 41 minutes and 30 seconds by John and Kenneth Hunter at Chicago in 1930, was topped last Thursday.

The unofficial record of 647 hours 28 minutes and 30 seconds, set in 1930 by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine at St. Louis, was passed at 1 minute after noon today.

Naval Policies Scored in Book By Ex-U. S. Aid

By Harris B. Hull.

The United States has "an amateur" and an "inferior" Navy which "is not prepared for war," according to a series of scathing charges against American naval men and policy made public yesterday by F. Russell Bichowsky, formerly superintendent of the Physical Chemistry Division of the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C.

Now employed in private industry, Bichowsky outlines his indictment in a book released by the Vanguard Press titled, "Is the Navy Ready?" At the end of 230 pages of reading material, the former Government scientist's answer to his titular question is, "No, emphatically no." He suggests that the President appoint a commission similar to the Federal Aviation Commission to conduct a special investigation.

Comment Lacking.

Members of the Navy's General Board refused to comment yesterday on the charges. It was pointed out unofficially that the ranking admirals did not wish to "dignify nor advertise this man's work with a formal Navy Department statement."

Following a lengthy process of reasoning supported by quotations from a long list of well-known figures including George Washington, Representative Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Milledgeville, Ga., Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lord Haldane, as well as scores of naval officers, Bichowsky charges among other things that:

1. American naval gunnery is poorer today than after the Spanish-American War.
2. This country is not in much better condition to wage a modern war than it was in 1917.
3. American naval officers approved the installation of dangerously defective steel parts in vital portions of the recent 10,000-ton cruisers.
4. Many of the ships of the new naval building program are obsolete before their keels are laid.
5. The United States Navy has been proved inferior to the British and German navies and indicated to be inferior to the Japanese.
6. The crash of the Akron was caused by incompetent officers.
7. Courses of instruction offered at the Naval Academy at Annapolis are deficient and the teaching is of poor caliber.
8. The Secretary of the Navy usually is a rubber stamp.
9. This country's prospective enemies fully appreciate the weakness of the American Navy.

Criticizes Other Nations.

Although the former Government official's attack is directed at the American Naval System, he broadens it in parts of his thesis to include criticism of the policies of other nations.

"The existence in the Navy of the several ship types is the result of an irrational combination of evolution, sound and unsound strategical and tactical principles, correct and incorrect analyses of the needs of national policy, imitation of foreign navies, treaty restrictions," he says.

"We can well sympathize with the French taxpayers who have recently had to finance the building of a 26,000-ton ship designed as an answer to the 10,000-ton German pocket-battleships.

"This disordered evolution of ship types has had fullest weight in the development of the battleship, which owes its present monstrous size and obsolete characteristics far more to international rivalry than to purposeful evolution."

Says He Knows More.

Bichowsky states that his list of charges does not include all the examples of naval inefficiency he has observed during his service with the Government. In this connection he says:

"The author for years was placed in charge of some of the most secret of the Navy's secret developments. The history of these contains some of the most illuminating instances of the inefficiency of the Navy system To disclose these or any other matters which would injure the Navy in time of war would be to betray a confidence, would be contrary to public interest and a violation of my oath. I have therefore omitted reference to my own experience and observation and have carefully avoided any specific matters which were not already in public record."

Bichowsky's attack on the American Navy is different from those written by other critics who have preceded him. First, it is not the work of an unimportant and uninformed man who is obliged to fall back on sensationalism to compensate for his obscurity.

Officials of the Navy Department declared yesterday that he always was "outstanding as a physicist," and that he left the Navy by resignation with an "honorable record." These same authorities stated that the reason he left the Government service was due to the "provisions of the economy act of 1933 when funds for research work were curtailed drastically."

Resignation Forced.

And strangely enough, although the Navy Department gives him a clean bill of health, Bichowsky himself writes that "One misguided attempt forced my resignation from the Navy," when speaking of his efforts to draw attention to "weaknesses of material and organization."

Secondly his charges are unique in that they are surrounded with a wealth of accurate factual information on naval strength and strategy of the great powers. It is from this highly condensed little library of naval data that he carefully draws the conclusions which form the basis of the book. And these conclusions, finally, are very brief, the main part of his work being made up of the background material.

Officials of the Vanguard Press, publishers of the book, state in a preface that we "agree neither with the author's point of view toward the Navy nor with the 'reforms' he suggests." But, they add, "the facts are so important that we are glad to offer this book."

With the book hardly off the presses, observers were unwilling to comment yesterday. But one civilian expert, after a hurried reading, stated that Bichowsky seemed to have prejudiced the conclusions of his unusual treatise by two of his deductions.

In the first of these Bichowsky draws a comparison between the United States Navy and the German navy. Secondly, he says that American officers without gunnery training are put in charge of guns.

"To any one familiar with international naval matters and naval training systems these two statements appear so ridiculous, in the midst of a great deal of material that is not ridiculous, that the author has detracted seriously from the final conclusions he has been able to draw," this naval authority said.

Between You and Me

Give Congress a Chance! Power Lobby Not Alone in Applying Pressure in Utility Bill Fight.

By Raymond Clapper

For a change, how about giving Congress a chance?

Both sides have imposed on the House of Representatives in the utility fight. Continuation of such tactics will make it impossible for Congress to legislate intelligently about anything.

The pressure which has come from both sides in this fight has placed the House of Representatives in a humiliating position. On the so-called "death sentence" issue it has been made almost impossible for a member of Congress to call his soul his own. The ruthless intensity of the fight was such that no matter which way a member voted, he was tagged as either bought by the Administration or bought by the utilities.

The scene when the House voted on the "death sentence" amendment was not one which tended to inspire confidence in representative government. The hapless members, as they seethed into the well of the House to go down the line like nameless sheep and be counted, wore the hunted look of fugitives at bay. Some members had been so harassed that they sat tight in their seats, apparently afraid to vote either way. Intemperate speeches on both sides revealed the harassed state of mind of the members. One member shouts, "to hell with the power trust."

In the gallery sit lawyers and agents of the power companies, watching closely, noting every speech and scanning the faces as members walk down the line being counted.

In the aisle seat is Dr. Hugh Magill, representing the utilities investors, whose circulars against the bill have been mailed out by thousands to all stockholders in power companies. He is a former school teacher, active in religious organizations, a former buddy of Secretary Ickes in Illinois politics, and in 1926 an independent Republican candidate for the Senate in Illinois against Frank Smith, who was denied his seat because he had been elected with the help of Insull money. His work has done much to stir the bombardment of pro-utilities mail which has reached Senators and Representatives from back home. Numerous utility lawyers, quartered in Washington hotels, have worked more directly on members of Congress while at the same time inspiring key men back home to work through political supporters and campaign contributors of the various members.

Off stage, with his base in the tration contract man or lobbyist, Charles West, tall, lean, smooth former Representative from Ohio. Technically an employee of the Farm Credit Administration, he spends practically no time at that job. That is merely a device for paying him.

West goes to the White House practically every morning about 9:30, to get his orders and suggestions. Then he goes to the Capitol. During this fight he also has been aided by Emil Hurja, who in spite of his 225 pounds can move around without making scarcely a sound. During the last two days the telephones in the House cloakroom have been ringing constantly from downtown calls. Every Representative faces re-election next year. Administration help is vital to many of them. There is the $4,000,000,000 works fund and the vast amount of other patronage under the emergency agencies all under the complete control of the White House.

It has been a war of lobbies, one private and one governmental.

Mr. Roosevelt has called the utilities lobby one of the most "dangerous" that ever operated here. The same description might also be applied to the governmental lobby.

Activity does not have to be illegal to be detrimental to good government. You can not have a fair trial if the courthouse is surrounded by two howling mobs. Neither can you have considered legislation with two armies of storm troops milling around the doors. All elements of the population have the right of petition and the President has the constitutional right to make recommendations to Congress. Under the colors of those two rights, which are highly important, you have now two blackjack crews. Only a body of superhuman men, which the House certainly is not, could legislate calmly and dispassionately under such circumstances.

This is a good time for the crowd to stand back and give Congress a chance to hear itself think. It is barely possible that in the presence of self-restraint by the public and by the Administration Congress might rise to the occasion.

The House vote on the "death sentence" was a far sharper defeat for the Administration than anyone anticipated. The vote, 216 to 146, left the Administration 71 votes short of winning. Seventy-three did not vote. Thus if the Administration rallied every remaining vote it would wind up by a margin of only 2 votes. The vote against the "death sentence" was within 2 of a clear majority of the House.

Such an overwhelming decision cannot be entirely the work of the utilities lobby. However much of a hand it had in the result, the outcome is too sweeping to be attributed to its work alone. It is incredible that members of Congress facing re-election next year could have gone that far in face of public sentiment to the contrary.

* * * *

It will never be possible to find out how much the tag "death sentence" had to do with the result. That phrase was a stroke of genius in the utility industry. It fixed a convenient label on the stronger Senate provision and carried an implication of injustice and arbitrary extinction which went considerably beyond the language of the provision.

Mr. Roosevelt's use of a former Representative as a congressional lobbyist is not original with him. Mr. Hoover also had one and the practice was as unpopular on Capitol Hill under his Administration as it is now.

Coolidge operated through regular leaders. He also confessed after leaving the White House that he often put measures through by not letting any one know he wanted them. He said that if he declared publicly for a certain bill, he could expect certain members automatically to oppose it. But if he kept still, they often voted for it, not realizing that he wanted it. It helped keep him out of trouble.

If Mr. Roosevelt had been an emperor in ancient Rome, he probably would have done what one of them did.

Observing a crowd in front of a goldsmith's shop, Emperor Claudius found that the cause was a full-sized silver chariot on display. It had been made for a wealthy Roman. Claudius ordered the goldsmith to strip off the precious metal and sell it by weight to the government to be melted down into coin.

Rich Romans protested, but Claudius explained that such a heavy chariot would damage the public pavements. "We must lighten it up a bit," he told them. To his intimates he explained that such ostentation was an incitement to popular disorder, that when food was scarce in the city the populace would not like to see a jolly rich man with a big stomach riding around in a silver chariot.

The rich said: "He'll be pulling the gowns off our backs next. The man's insane. We must get rid of him."

Instead, Claudius grew more powerful. Eventually the Senate built him a silver chariot like the one he had destroyed and he rode in it in his triumphal procession.

3 Labor Boards Get Extension; New Setup Due

National Relations Unit to Continue One Month; Coal Miners Agree.

Preliminary to setting up new administrative machinery under the Wagner labor disputes bill, President Roosevelt yesterday extended the life of the National Labor Relations Board for one month and that of the steel and textile labor boards indefinitely. While no intimation of further plans came from the White House, it is expected that these organizations will become a part of the new labor set-up.

The boards were created under the old NRA, but they have not been functioning since codes were outlawed by the Supreme Court. While the national board under the President's order will continue to August 1, it is expected that the President will sign the Wagner bill within the next day or two and that he will form the new labor organization soon.

Meanwhile, virtually the entire soft coal industry accepted the offer of the United Mine Workers of America to continue the present labor contract until August 1. The miners agreed to the extension at the request of Secretary Perkins Saturday night.

The Pocahontas and Tug River producers of West Virginia, however, protested to President Roosevelt against the extension.

M. L. Garvey, representative of these producers, said in a telegram to the President:

"Any delay in making a wage contract for the purpose of enacting questionable legislation, or otherwise, is detrimental to the interests of all involved.

"Consumers will be driven to further use of laborless sources of heat and power, making it harder to collect from the public the money necessary to pay miners' wages on the present levels."

The producers represented by Garvey are opposing passage of the Guffey bill setting up a "little NRA" for the coal industry.

Veterans Ask Code For War Prevention

Ex-Soldiers of Germany Join With Opponents.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 1.—World War Veterans from Germany and her old enemies sought a war-prevention code for Europe today in their first official meeting in Paris.

An agreement to "get together" on a plan to forestall another conflict was reported reached in secret talks arranged by the International Veterans' Organization "Fidac." A committee was appointed to draft "principles" for submission to the conference tomorrow.

Only generalities were expected to come out of the conference, however, as the delegates carefully avoided such controversial questions as Germany's rearmament. The first contact between two former opposing sides was regarded by veterans as the most important feature of the meeting.

Pearson Hints Counter-Blast On Virgin Isles

Governor Ready to Back His Regime Before Senate Today.

By the Associated Press.

Hints of counter-charges that would reveal "something rotten in the former possessions of Denmark" came last night from the office of Gov. Paul M. Pearson of the Virgin Islands, whose administration faces Senate investigators this morning at 10 o'clock.

Adding to his declaration yesterday that he would name a Harlem Negro "prominent in the numbers racket" as one of the most persistent persecutors of his regime, the white-haired Governor said he had been assembling data which "may prove very embarrassing" to those seeking his removal.

Among these he mentioned Charles H. Gibson, former Baltimore lawyer and discharged Virgin Island government attorney, and Paul M. Yates, one-time newspaperman who was removed by Pearson as administrative assistant last year "for the good of the service."

Seven Islanders Arrive.

Yates, Gibson and seven Virgin Islanders suspoenaed by the Senate Investigating Committee arrived in New York yesterday, but had not checked in with the committee late in the day.

They and others have filed charges against the 64-year-old Governor, including illegal use of funds, padding of pay rolls, diversion of relief food to the British Island of Tortolo and destruction of foodstuffs intended for the poor.

Three administration officials who arrived Saturday from St. Thomas were closeted with Pearson most of the day, working on preparation of testimony for the committee. They were summoned at request of Secretary Ickes, whose Interior Department is in charge of the colonial administration of the former Danish islands.

Ickes Attacks Yates.

Ickes meanwhile renewed his attack on Yates, asserting on the steps of the White House that Pearson's former aid always was "viewing with alarm" the Interior Department's administration of island possessions.

"He gets more alarmed the farther off they are," Ickes said in commenting on Yates' charges of maladministration of the Hawaiian Islands.

Asserting that he would be the first witness at the opening session of the inquiry, Ickes added that "as a matter of course" he would have the right to cross-examine witnesses.

S. Johnson, who was named works administrator for the city last week. Mayor LaGuardia is a member of the allotment board which made the recommendation.

The work to be done under the new allotment is expected to include numerous "white collar" jobs as well as labor jobs. No high-cost construction work can be done because money is not available for materials. The average is well below the $1,143 figure set by President Roosevelt as an average for all projects.

Personnel Reduction Here.

With inauguration of the new works plan, which was forecast by The Post last week, reduction in personnel of the Division of Allotments and Information, headed by Frank C. Walker, will continue. The new plan makes much of the DAI organization unnecessary, but it will continue to function as a publicity and information service. There also will be little for the allotment board to do except to recommend State quotas and to handle such allotments as are made for PWA and Federal projects.

The allotment board yesterday recommended 40 small non-Federal PWA projects to cost $5,110,689. This brings the total allotments for this type of projects to about $27,000,000. All the allotments have been made on the basis of 45 per cent grants from the works fund, making it necessary for the communities involved to borrow the remainder either from private sources or from the PWA revolving fund, which is separate from the works money.

Other Allotments Made.

The board also recommended allotment of an additional $100,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps and $50,000,000 for the new Youth Program set up last week by President Roosevelt. All of the allotments are subject to the President's approval.

Meanwhile, the FERA turned over to the States a total of $88,174,139 to be used for direct relief in July. No money was allotted for rural rehabilitation or for various work projects which will be taken over under the works program. Of the relief fund the District was given $550,000, Virginia, $800,000, and Maryland, $900,000.

Tugwell in New Job.

The FERA also announced that it would continue its educational projects which will be paid for from works funds. This program employs about 40,000 teachers who are on relief and about 2,000,000 adults are given instruction. Aid for college students, which has come from FERA, will in the future be taken care of under the Youth Program.

Undersecretary Tugwell, as head of the rural resettlement division, yesterday formally took over the rural rehabilitation work which has been under the FERA. President Roosevelt approved an allotment of $91,000,000 for the division. Originally an allotment of $100,000,000 had been recommended, but $9,000,000 had been given to Hopkins to continue the work until Tugwell took it over.

"I expect to continue where Hopkins has left off," Tugwell said when asked about his immediate plans.

The Prseident also approved $69,985,000 for PWA housing projects in 24 cities, as proposed by Secretary Ickes. This program is still being held up, Ickes said, for approval by Comptroller General McCarl. He said he did not know the reason for the delay. Ickes has proposed housing projects to cost $249,000,000.

Allotments requested yesterday included $350,000 for construction of a building to house a mining experiment station for research work in mineral technology at College Park, Md., and $188,170 for new buildings and reconstruction of old buildings at Fort Humphreys.

slashed, giving the Government a profit of more than $2,800,000,000 on its vast holdings of the yellow metal. Of that, $2,000,000,000 was set aside for the use of the stabilization fund.

Coincident with the transfer, a deposit of $100,000,000 in gold certificates issued against the gold profits was made at the Federal Reserve banks. This will be used to reimburse the national banks for the bonds which formerly backed their national bank notes, and, in the ordinary course of business, replace the bank notes as circulating money.

The banks have been making huge deposits at the Treasury ever since the plan was announced nearly four months ago. With these they have repurchased the bonds which backed those notes, and replaced them with legal tender of other kinds, thus transferring to the Treasury the obligation of redeeming the bank notes.

Since the first anouncement was made, however, the total of notes in circulation has decreased only from $986,000,000 to $741,000,000.

Senate Fights Extra Session To Weigh Taxes

Administration's Leaders Oppose Minority Move to Postpone Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Administration Democrats yesterday rejected a proposal by Senate Republicans to postpone consideration of President Roosevelt's tax program until a special session in November, but the minority leadership determined to push the suggestion to a vote.

A resolution, calling for a special session November 18, was formally advanced by Senator McNary, Republican leader, on behalf of Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who was out of the city.

Immediate opposition came from Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, leader of the drive, to consider the tax recommendations at this session.

Plans to Open Hearings.

"We're going ahead with the tax bill at this session," Harrison said, emphatically. He planned to begin hearings within a few days, in order to expedite consideration of the measure. House hearings are scheduled to begin Monday.

McNary said, however, that he would ask for a vote today on the Hastings plan.

"It's become apparent," McNary said, "that the Administration schedules will raise nearer $100,000,000 than $340,000,000. To get any money we will have to revise the whole tax structure. The taxes are not levied until next year, anyway. What's the hurry?"

McNary said the special session proposal probably would be defeated, but added many Democrats privately favored it. "There isn't a fellow in this chamber that doesn't think it's perfectly foolish to take up this tax question now," he said.

La Follette Asks Speed.

"I'm opposed to that proposition," La Follette said, "because the time to levy these taxes is now. Every month that goes by delays the collection of much needed revenue. If it's proposed by Hastings, it's a move on the part of those implacably opposed to taxes on the ability to pay.

"It demonstrates the inconsistency of their position. They yell about the unbalanced budget and when it is proposed to cut down the deficit they want to put it off six months."

The Hastings resolution proposed that when Congress "shall have completed its legislative program, except for the revenue bill, it shall adjourn until Monday, November 18, 1935."

It proposed that, meanwhile, the revenue committees of the two Houses should "study the financial condition of the Government as to income and expenditures and make such recommendations as they find necessary to balance the budget and begin the reduction of the national debt."

Hands Off Mexico, Hull Advises U. S.

Report to Senate Covers Church Situation.

By the Associated Press.

A report by Secretary Hull on the Mexican religious situation, submitted to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was disclosed on good authority yesterday to advise strongly against any kind of American interference.

The committee will hold a special session today to consider the report.

It was understood the Hull study, supplemented by documents and information from Ambassador Daniels at Mexico, D. F., called attention to the fact that no request for protection of American rights has come from Americans in Mexico but only from those in the United States.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, said Saturday he planned to introduce a resolution seeking recall of Ambassador Daniels because of his failure to appear before the committee when requested to do so.

Woman Accused Of State Larceny

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminister, Md., July 1.—Charged with larceny of State property, Mrs. Lillian McDonald, instructor of occupational therapy at Springfield State Hospital, was in the Carroll County Jail here tonight after several large packing boxes, which she is said to have expressed, were intercepted in Baltimore.

The boxes contained rugs, embroidery work, and other articles made by patients at the hospital for periodical sales sponsored to aid the upkeep cost of the institution. The goods were estimated by officials to be worth $500.

Tonight, police said that the boxes were addressed to Mrs. Charles Comson, Georgetown, S. C. She, they said, is a sister of Mrs. McDonald.

The arrest of Mrs. McDonald, connected with the institution for six years, followed an investigation by Stanley G. Parks, a hospital patrolman.

Acting on information furnished by Parks, John A. Shipley, sheriff of Carroll County, this afternoon ordered packing cases alleged to have been sent by Mrs. McDonald removed from the train in Baltimore.

Eccles' Power Swept Away By Banking Bill Provisions

Federal Reserve Board and five representatives selected by the Reserve Bank heads; Reserve Banks would be required to participate in all open market operations decided on by this group.

Reserve Banks would be required to re-establish its discount rate every 14 days, which must be approved by the Reserve Board, thus giving the latter agency virtual control over device of regulating credit.

The Reserve Board would have authority to change deposit reserve requirements, but may not increase them to more than twice the amount now required by law.

Within 90 days of the passage of the measure, the Reserve Board would be reorganized, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency being dropped as exoficio members; the President would be required to name seven members, whose terms would not be for more than 14 years and they may not be reappointed and the name of the agency would be changed to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, while the executive officer of the board would be known as the chairman.

The executive heads—the 12 Federal Reserve banks—now known as governors and appointed annually, would be known as presidents, named by their boards of directors for five-year terms, with the approval of the board of governors; a vice president for each bank would be chosen in similar manner.

The board would be required to report annually to Congress regarding open market operations and other questions of policy, giving the reasons for such action taken.

National banks would be authorized to make real estate loans, on property within its Reserve districts or within 100 miles, up to 50 per cent of the appraised value of the property for a five-year maturity, except that loans up to 60 per cent of appraised value for ten years may be made if on an amortized basis which assures repayment of one-half the loan in ten years.

Under rigid restrictions banks and trust companies may engage in underwriting security issues, thus liberalizing the prohibition against such activities in the 1933 banking act.

Hereafter no private banker or director, officer or employe of more than one bank may become a director, officer or employe of any Reserve bank, except that persons falling under this ban already in the service of a Reserve bank may continue until February 1, 1939.

Foremost in importance in all drafts of the Eccles bank bill are the provisions dealing with the three usual devices for controlling the flow of credit, namely, open market operations, discount rates and deposit reserve requirements. By manipulating these three devices it is possible to tighten or ease the money market.

Present Operations.

At the present time open market operations—which chiefly consist of the purchase and sale of Government securities—are determined by a committee of 12 representatives of the Reserve banks, the board of directors of each bank selecting one. Their decisions are subject to approval of the board. At present, any Reserve bank may refuse to participate in an open market operation by giving 30 days' notice.

Under the Eccles bill as it passed the House a committee of five representatives of the Reserve bank would consult and advise with the Reserve Board regarding open market policy, changes in discount rates or changes in Reserve deposit requirements. But the authority for ordering open market operations, which would be mandatory on the Reserve banks, would rest with the Reserve Board.

The Glass sub-committee draft of the bill would create an open market committee consisting of the members of the Reserve Board, reduced by the bill to seven, and five representatives of the Reserve banks to be selected annually by a majority vote of the 12 presidents of the banks.

Abide by Regulations.

"No Federal Reserve bank shall engage or decline to engage in open market operations under Section 14 of this act, except in accordance with regulations adopted by the committee," the bill further read. "The committee shall consider, adopt and transmit to the several Federal Reserve banks, regulations relating to the open market transactions of such banks and the relations of the Federal Reserve System with foreign central or other foreign banks."

Thus while the committee might excuse a bank from participating in an open market operation, one or more of the banks could not thwart the determined policy against the wishes of the committee. This mandatory feature was not quite so clear when the Glass subcommittee's draft was first revealed, because the words "or decline to engage," as quoted above, were absent. They were added by the full committee in its consideration of the measure.

The Glass sub-committee was reported to have intended that the open market committee should have power to enforce its decisions and it was contended that this was the case when the language providing a bank could refuse to participate on 30 days' notice.

Deal Only in Open Market.

Another new feature of the bill inserted at this point provided that the Reserve banks could buy and sell Government securities "only in the open market." This amendment was regarded as of greatest importance by those who have been fearful that the new open market system might be used solely to finance Treasury deficits by direct sales of securities by the Treasury to the Reserve banks. The belief that the latter might result is the basis for the fear that passage of the original Eccles proposal might lead to inflation.

The sub-committee also wrote into the bill law the existing provision that "the time, character and volume of all purchases and sales of paper described in section 14 of this act as eligible for open market operations shall be governed with a view to accommodating commerce and business and with regard to their bearing upon the general credit situation of the country."

Administration banking officials were not disturbed by these restrictions, pointing out that they have always contended that the proposed powers would not be used solely to finance Treasury deficits. But they were disturbed by the proposal to continue the present divided authority, which it has been contended has so often thwarted effective Reserve system action, over open market operations.

It was pointed out that to deadlock the open market committee and prevent any proposed action, all the five representatives of reserve banks, if they were a unit, need do would be to persuade one member of the board to join them. This would not be difficult, it was further argued, either because in a seven-man board it would not be unnatural for at least one member sincerely to disagree with the wisdom of such action or because in a bi-partisan board one of the members of the minority party might undertake a course hostile to the political majority.

Would Gain Control.

If the representatives of the reserve banks, acting as a unit, persuaded two members of the board to join them, they would have control of the committee, it was contended, and might embark on operations which the other five members of the board opposed. Such operations, it was explained, might be undertaken to offset the use of another credit-control device by the board, such as changing the discount rates or the reserve requirements.

This is the basis for Administration opposition to the new proposal. On the other hand, it was the type of compromise which the American Bankers Association and many other bankers favored on the ground that the reserve banks, managed by practical bankers, should have some word as to open market operations.

The second device for controlling credit is the discount rate of the various reserve banks. Under present law the banks take the initiative in proposing a change in the rate, subject to review and determination by the board. As the bill passed the House the board would have full power over discount rates, including that of initiating them.

The Glass sub-committee bill technically leaves with the reserve banks the authority to initiate changes in discount rates but provides that each bank "shall establish such rates every 14 days, or oftener if deemed necessary."

Discount Rate Control.

In Federal Reserve Board circles this was interpretated as giving that agency full control over discount rates. The Reserve banks in the past have thwarted the board's desire for a change in the rate by failing to take any action, thus leaving the board nothing to act on, it was argued.

Under the new provision each bank every fortnight must submit a discount rate to the board for approval. On most occasions the rate submitted would be the one already in effect. But if the board wished that rate changed it could withhold its approval and unless the bank met the board's wishes, the bank could be stopped from further discounting operations, it was contended.

The third proposed credit-control device is reserve requirements, which now are specified by law. Under present law member banks are required to keep on deposit as reserves with the Reserve banks 7, 10 and 13 per cent of their demand deposits, depending on local banking classifications.

The board now, however, on the vote of five of its members and with the approval of the President, may declare that an emergency exists by reason of credit expansion and may increase or decrease the reserve requirements within its discretion.

Under the Eccles bill, as it passed the House, the board is authorized "to prevent injurious credit expansion or contraction" to change the reserve requirements as it may deem desirable.

Provision Changed.

The Glass sub-committee bill would strike from the law the emergency provision cited above and in its place would provide that on the affirmative provision cited above and in its place would provide that on the affirmative vote of five members the Reserve Board "in order to prevent injurious credit expansion or contraction may by regulation change" the reserve requirements, but the amount of required reserves "shall not be less than the amount" now required by law "nor more than twice such amount."

This change likewise is in line with the recommendations of various banking spokesmen who appeared before the Glass sub-committee. It is opposed within the Administration on the ground that it so narrowly limits such action that it might be ineffective if used, particularly in the near future with large excess reserves.

It was argued that no account was taken by the Glass sub-committee of the danger threatened by the huge volume of excess reserves now piled up. From the Administration viewpoint, it was said, the revised proposal would be improved if the board were given greater latitude in changing reserve requirements during periods when excess reserves are large.

Business Stability.

The objective of reserve board operations proposed in the House bill, but omitted by the Glass group was to the effect that it shall be the board's duty to "exercise such powers as it possesses in such manner as to promote conditions conducive to business stability and to mitigate by its influence unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action and credit administration."

This was bitterly opposed in some quarters on the ground that it constituted a mandate to the board to become an economic planning agency for the Nation, manipulating credit to promote and maintain economic stability. It was contended that no board of seven or eight men should have such power.

The only other major controversial proposal in the Glass subcommittee draft was that permitting banks and trust companies, including private banks, to engage again, under rigid conditions, in the underwriting of securities. This provision would enable the J. P. Morgan banking house now a deposit and commercial bank, again to engage in underwriting activities.

The full committee struck from this section of the bill the subcommittee's proposal that such underwriting activities by banks be exempted from the liabilities of the securities act. Senator Glass said this was agreeable to him.

"Misleading and False."

Before the committee, and again at a press conference, he sharply assailed as "misleading and false" statements in a New York newspaper last week that this provision would place the underwriting situation where it was prior to the adoption of the 1933 banking act.

He said that the present provision differed radically from the former situation and permitted such action only under the following conditions:

"1. Banks are limited in underwriting the obligations of any one issue to 10 per cent of their unimpaired capital and surplus.

"2. No bank can underwrite more than 20 per cent of any one issue unless it is $100,000 or less, thus spreading any risk that may exist among various underwriters.

"3. Total commitments for underwriting shall not exceed 200 per cent of unimpaired capital and surplus.

"4. Sales cannot be made to customers of the banks.

"5. Sales cannot be made to other banks or corespondent banks.

"6. Sales must be made on an exchange registered as a national securities exchange under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or to dealers or brokers who are registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"7. Such underwriting is further limited by such limitations and restrictions as may be prescribed by the Comptroller of the Currency."

Senate Group Favors Action To Aid Farmer

Frazier-Lemke Bill, Altered to Fit Constitution, Is Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Much revised in an effort to meet Supreme Court objections, the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill was reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by the Judiciary Committee.

The re-drafted bill seeks to give the farmer a three-year "moratorium" from foreclosure under the machinery of the Federal bankruptcy act, instead of the five-year extension provided in the measure recently declared unconstitutional by the court.

At the same time the committee voted to report out a somewhat parallel measure designed to extend similar relief to owners of homes and small businesses.

The report on the latter bill has not been prepared by the committee, but Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, a member, said it conformed in large measure to the revised farm mortgage legislation.

Reporting on the effort to revive the farm mortgage measure, the committee said:

"Many State moratoriums, and there were 26, are about to expire, and when they expire, there undoubtedly will be an avalanche of foreclosures, whereas, if this bill is passed, these foreclosures will be held in abeyance.

"Nine out of ten of the distressed farmers will be able to get adjustments outside of the court, because of the moral effect of the act, and in the rest of the cases there will be orderly liquidation, with a view of the rehabilitation of the farm debtor, as well as full protection to the creditors.

"This the public conscience as well as public interest and welfare demands."

In an effort to avoid conflict with the Supreme Court, which held that the old bill transgresses the constitutional guarantees of property rights, the bill would place the entire transaction under jurisdiction of the Federal courts. This would apply from the moment the creditor or farmer-debtor appeals for a composition of his debts, until the final time when the farmer after his three-year extension of time, is able to refinance.

As in the old bill, the new measure would provide for scaling down the indebtedness in keeping with the appraised value of the property under mortgage.

But the old section which permitted the farmer to buy back his property at the appraised value on a six-year installment plan was stricken out. This section was one of those hit by the court.

"If the debtor fails to comply with any or all of the provisions, or if he is unable to refinance himself," the committee report said, "the court may order the appointment of a trustee (at the end of the three year moratorium) and order the property sold or otherwise disposed of."

"The property," the committee report continued, "is virtually in the complete custody and control of the court, for all purposes of liquidation. We feel confident that this meets all the requirements of the Supreme Court's decision."

None of the committee members would predict when the Senate's business would permit the measure to come up.

Navy officials said last night that Capt. Charles E. Parsons, a naval supply officer, had been ordered to Alaska from Mare Island as a technical adviser to S. R. Fuller, jr., in an investigation of the Matanuska Valley colonization project.

Fuller recently was requested by Harry L. Hopkins, FERA head, to see what could be done to bring the project to a speedy and successful conclusion. Assigned to temporary duty, Parsons probably will be in Alaska a month or more, officials said.

Long Filibuster Attacking I.C.C. Halts Port Bill

Moore, N. J., Loser Despite 'Kingfish' Consent to Vote Today.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, staged a miniature filibuster yesterday in the Senate, talking all day in an effort to prevent a vote to take up a bill giving shipping ports the right to appeal from discriminatory railroad rates.

There was talk of a night session to wear him out, but he finally agreed to a vote today.

Friends of the measure conceded, however, that Long probably had succeeded in preventing enactment of the bill, at least for the present. By the time it is taken up today, other and more important business will be ready and may displace it.

Senator Moore (Democrat), New Jersey, who made the motion to take up the bill immediately after the Senate met at noon, sought to force a vote on it yesterday. But other Senators were not willing to stay in session long enough to "break" Long.

The Louisiana Senator denied he was "filibustering" on the bill, contending that he talked all day long about the bill and did not wander into any other subject. Long argued that the bill would "break down business built up for 100 years."

He said the bill would interfere with New Orleans trade with Latin America. That "Latin City" had been best able to deal with Latin America, he said, but the Interstate Commerce Commission would give better rail rates to other cities.

Moore told the Senate Congress originally intended that ports should have the right to appeal to the ICC, but the Supreme Court had held otherwise, in a case brought by Long for New Orleans.

The measure, Moore said, was sought by the ICC to permit it to carry out a rate building program it had undertaken nearly 50 years ago.

Long contended that the ICC should be abolished. He said it had "destroyed the finest network of transportation in the history of the world" and left it "in rust, and wrack and ruin."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, finally proposed the unanimous consent agreement for a vote today on taking the bill up. Moore at first objected, insisting upon a vote yesterday, but finally yielded.

Humphreys Named Head of Truckers

National Group Elects Him at the Mayflower.

William E. Humphreys, who has been in the trucking business in Washington since 1914, yesterday was elected chairman of a national group of truckers. The national group is sponsored by the American Trucking Association, meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Humphreys, president of the Jacobs Transfer Co., was born in Ireland and came to this country at the age of 21. He is known as an advocate of Federal regulation of trucking rates. P. L. Snowden is the District's other representative at the meeting here.

The Trucking Association adopted a resolution opposing the motor carrier bill approved by a House sub-committee, on the ground that it does not apply to all road carriers. The association wants regulation of all competing types of carriers, a definite rate structure, and the banning of road carriers unless they are shown to be necessary for the public convenience.

Ousting of Richards Will Be Aired Today

Elkton, July 1 (AP).—The complaint of the Cecil County board of commissioners against the State Roads Commission over the dismissal of Joseph T. Richards as county roads engineer is to be heard in circuit court here tomorrow.

Third of Nation Poorly Housed, Parley Agrees

Tugwell Conferees Assert Government Must Initiate Cure.

By the Associated Press.

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., July 1.—Advisers to the Resettlement and Housing Conference called by Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, agreed today that more than one-third of the Nation is inadequately housed and that the Government is the only agency equipped to initiate a cure.

They prepared to consider what facilities would be most needed in rural, urban and suburban resettlement work to "put life" into the communities planned by the Government to aid stricken populations.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was among the 50 conferees who discussed subsistence homesteads, communities built with relief funds, and potential resettlement work for which Congress allocated $500,000,000 in the new re-employment program.

The premise that more than one-third of the Nation's homes are substandard is based on studies by the real property inventory and farm housing survey of the Federal Government itself, Ernest J. Bohn, of Cleveland, chairman of the conference said.

"It is obvious," Bohn said, "that unassisted private ventures could not help people near the bottom of the economic scale. The Government is the only agency equipped to handle it. This could be done with Government credit, long-term loans without credit to the taxpayer, and various degrees of subsidy where low income groups are concerned.

"This would leave to private industry the providing of housing for those of the higher income group."

Mrs. Roosevelt, who arrived early today after losing her way to this mountain-surrounded resort, insisted on being principally "a listener" and knitted while the discussion progressed. She said, however, that the building of a new morale into transplanted populations is as essential as new houses.

At Tugwell's suggestion, the group discussed ways of helping the inhabitants of subsistence homesteads to support themselves. The colonies are self-liquidating and the Government is seeking means of helping the residents to increase their incomes.

Boy, Struck by Diver, Rescued From Pool

In a freak accident at the Takoma Park municipal swimming pool, Charles M. Young, 15, was injured yesterday afternoon. Police said the boy swam under the diving board and was injured by an unidentified diver.

The impact stunned the boy, who lives in the 4800 block of Seventh street northwest, and he sank. He was rescued about five minutes later by Jack Levine, whose address was not learned by police.

Young was revived by artificial respiration and taken to Emergency Hospital suffering from immersion and head and shoulder injuries. His condition is not thought to be serious.

Georgetown Residents Want Cab Zone Extende

Kennedy Again Heads the SEC; Rumors Spiked

Appointment Puts at Rest Report He Was Ready to Quit Board.

By the Associated Press.

Joseph P. Kennedy yesterday was re-elected to the chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange Commission for a second year.

The commission action, taken amid recurrent rumors that Kennedy plans to return soon to private life, was believed to indicate he would continue in his post at least some months longer though not necessarily for a full year.

By law, the chairman must be named annually. In similar Government agencies a rotation of commissioners in the chairmanship is customary. Kennedy became chairman last July 1, when the securities act went into operation.

Under his regime the commission has extended its regulatory power to the Nation's major stock exchanges and has received registrations of most important securities.

Kennedy's year as chairman also has seen a record-breaking increase in security flotations. The total for the first six months of 1935 was greater than for all of 1934.

Dewey Placed In Command of Crime Probe

Young Prosecutor to Seek Vice and Politics Tie in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Thomas E. Dewey, vigorous young attorney and former Federal district attorney, was placed today at the helm of a new drive on commercialized vice and crime, comparable potentially to the not-to-be-forgotten Seabury investigation of four years ago.

Selected by Gov. Lehman as his choice to supersede District Attorney William C. Dodge in smashing vice and rackets, Dewey accepted the formal appointment as special prosecutor from Dodge upon the conditions of "absolute freedom" and adequate investigating facilities.

The gathering forces of the new drive throw into dark retrospect a half century or more of deep-rooted criminality and racketeering in New York City.

While fashions in rackets and crime have changed with the times the elements of reform and law enforcement have warred—often with historic results—against politico-criminal liaisons since the sixties, when the first reverberations of the notorious Tweed ring exposures made citizens conscious of high pressure methods of graft and criminal operations.

Dewey at 32 becomes successor to the big club waved in New York by the Lexow committee, which smashed Tammany's "Dick" Croker and the tie-up of police and criminality; Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, who campaigned personally to break up street vice; Theodore Roosevelt, who as commissioner under Mayor William L. Strong broke down criminal strongholds, and Samuel Seabury, whose prosecution of vice, rackets and politics shattered Tammany's nerve and shook the throne from under Mayor James J. Walker.

The young prosecutor, who jailed the notorious "Waxey" Gordon and indicted "Dutch" Schultz, faces the problems of highly commercialized vice, policy, game racketeering in operations estimated to be netting annually $100,000,000, "shake down" rackets in a dozen business and industrial fields, and strong implications of political protection of big-time racketeers.

Dewey's appointment followed upon an ultimatum of Gov. Lehman to Dodge to appoint a special prosecutor in racket matters, after the March grand jury denounced the district attorney for laxity in office and flatly spoke of probable underworld connections in city courts and political offices. From Dodge came assurances of "100 per cent cooperation."

Dewey indicated he would follow the same painstaking methods used by Seabury in directing the legislative investigation by the Hoffstadter committee in 1931-32. The inquiry is scheduled to start July 29, the date of convening of the special term of Supreme Court ordered by the Governor.

SAFE AND SAVING

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS

Inferior roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a paving fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins! Maintenance costs go up and up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep . . . and no more new roads are built.

That's why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps.

Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic . . . reduces accidents . . . saves motorists up to two cents a mile in gas, tires, oil and repairs, as compared with driving on inferior roads.

D. C. Railway's Indebtedness May Be Bought

$325,000 Available to Anacostia and Potomac for Purpose.

Possibility that $325,000 will be available in the next few days to buy up part of the bonded indebtedness of the old Anacostia & Potomac River Railroad was seen last night when it was disclosed this sum is in the hands of the road's trustee.

Originally an independent road, operating from the Georgia and Florida avenue sector of this city, the concern was consolidated into the Washington Railway & Electric Co. about 1900. Two years ago when the W. R. & E. was merged with the Capital Traction Co., it automatically became a part of the Capital Transit Co.

Five-Year Note Paid.

A tract of land owned by the Anacostia road, included between Tenth and Eleventh streets northwest and bounded by Florida avenue, was sold to the Potomac Electric Power Co. in 1930 for $325,000. In payment, the power company gave a five-year note which matured June 30. Notice of completed payment by the company led to revelation of the contemplated bond purchase.

Officials of the Baltimore National Bank, trustees of the road and recipients of the payment, last night indicated that they were studying the indenture clause of the road's trust mortgage bonds for any possible limitations imposed by the original flotation. In previous similar cases they said the trustees had bought as many bonds on the open market as could be purchased with the available funds.

$2,906,000 Value.

They were confident in asserting that an immediate course of action would be decided on and that probably owners of the bonds would be given tenders to offer their holdings for sale.

Aggregate value of the road's trust mortgage bonds outstanding at the present time is $2,906,000. Of this amount, $455,000 was guaranteed for payment by the railway and electric company. The issue is payable in 1949 and bears interest of 5 per cent.

With an original par of 100, the guaranteed bonds are now being quoted at 107 on the Washington Stock Exchange, while the remainder of the issue is quoted at 90 bid and 93 asked.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Machine guns guarded the young heiress, Gloria Vanderbilt, in her play today as she started what is planned to be a quiet month in the country with her mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

By court decree, the 11-year-old heiress is to spend July with her mother, and to entertain Gloria Mrs. Vanderbilt has leased Phyfe House on Long Island. There is a private beach and a pony.

Two guards watched the gates to the estate, and when young Gloria goes for a swim in the Sound a speedboat equipped with a machine gun will cruise offshore. It was learned from the detectives that the grounds will be patrolled day and night.

Gloria arrived in mid-morning in the automobile of her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who won majority custody of the child from Mrs. Vanderbilt. Her governess and a private detective chaperoned her. Two waiting detectives escorted her from the machine to the spacious home.

Am. Smelting Co. Plans Refunding

$36,383,000 Expected to to Be Replaced.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Mid-August should see a definite announcement regarding plans for refunding the $36,383,000 funded debt of American Smelting & Refining Co., it was learned authoritatively today.

Negotiations have been conducted by officials of the company with several financial institutions looking to retirement of the 5 per cent series "A" first mortgage bonds and their replacement with an issue bearing a lower coupon rate. These conversations will be continued as details of the issue are settled.

Well informed quarters report that a part of the indebtedness will be paid off out of funds on hand. The company's balance sheet at the close of 1934 showed cash of $11,787,223 and United States Government securities amounting to $10,594,143.

It has been reliably reported that the company planned to dispose of the bonds in a block to one of the large life insurance companies.

Cuban Envoy's Daughter Hurt In Auto Crash

Miss Zoe Patterson, daughter of the Cuban Ambassador to this country, and Ernest Schlatter, secretary to the Swiss Minister here, are in a Warrenton, Va., hospital receiving treatment for injuries received in an auto accident Sunday night near Warrenton, it was learned last night.

Mr. Schlatter was the more seriously hurt, sustaining a fractured skull, cuts and bruises. Miss Patterson also was cut and bruised, although not so seriously. They are at the Fauquier County Hospital. Members of the staff of the Swiss Legation visited the hospital yesterday and reported both victims resting comfortably.

According to Town Sergt. Sam Hall, of Warrenton, the accident occurred when a light car, driven by Schlatter, crashed into another auto about six miles from Warrenton on the road to Fairfax. Sergt. Hall said that the other machine, driven by a colored man, pulled into the road in front of the Schlatter auto. The diplomat's car struck the other abreast the front door, Hall said.

The couple had been the dinner guests of Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller at her estate, View Tree, and were returning to Washington. Miss Patterson lives at 2360 Sixteenth street northwest. Mr. Schlatter lives at No. 1 Riggs Court northwest.

Boy, 5, Hit by Car, Taken to Hospital

George Grimes, 5, of the 300 block of Seventh street southeast, was injured seriously yesterday when he was struck by an auto in the 600 block of S street southeast. He was taken to Providence Hospital and treated for a fractured right thigh and lacerations.

Police said the car was driven by Howard L. Jenkins, 25, colored, of the 600 block of C street southeast. Jenkins was not held.

Miss Patterson's body was found in an upstairs room by her father, Morton C. Patterson, shortly after noon yesterday.

Federal Judge Quits to Direct Attack on AAA

Dawson, Kentucky Critic of New Deal, to Serve Milling Firm.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., July 1.—Charles I. Dawson, whose anti-New Deal decisions attracted Nation-wide attention, stepped down from the Federal bench today to become a barrister actively challenging the validity of New Deal legislation.

Immediately after Elwood Hamilton was sworn in to succeed him as judge of the Western District of Kentucky, Dawson appeared as counsel for the Washburn-Crosby Co., which is attacking the AAA's processing tax on wheat.

As Federal judge, Dawson ruled unconstitutional the New Deal's tobacco crop control act and the NRA as applied to coal mining. He also denied the right of the Government to condemn private property for low-cost housing projects.

In ruling on New Deal legislation, Judge Dawson declared the Constitution "must not be discarded or weakened to meet the exigencies of the moment."

Hamilton became the first Democratic Federal judge for this district since the Civil War. He believes in a liberal interpretation of the Constitution. His attiutde is that "words change as times change."

The Washburn-Crosby Co. is seeking a restraining order to prevent the Government from collecting $22,763 in May processing taxes. Judge Hamilton disqualified himself because he was attorney for the Louisville Provision Co. in a similar suit.

Judge H. Church Ford of the Eastern District, who was present at the induction ceremonies, took jurisdiction of the case and four similar ones. He granted the order but required the company to pay the tax, plus 1 per cent handling charge, into court, pending outcome of the suit.

German Army Service Opened to Foreigners

Berlin, July 1 (AP).—A decree by Adolf Hitler whereby the ministry of war is given permission to enlist foreigners in the German army was announced today.

The measure does not affect officers temporarily here, but "persons who for some reason are not German citizens and Germans living abroad who want to serve the Reich."

A number of foreigners fought for Germany in the World War.

Fumigating Gases Blamed for Death

Storage Company Employe Felled in Warehouse.

Apparently overcome by fumigating gases, Russell Gunn, 31, an agent for the Fidelity Storage Co., died yesterday en route to Emergency Hospital.

Gunn, according to a report to police, was found unconscious in a second floor storeroom of the company. The agent, it was reported, went to the room to obtain supplies. When he failed to return, fellow employes investigated and found him unconscious on the floor.

The room, police were told, was fumigated several days ago. Acid fumes were detected by workers who found Gunn, police learned.

Educators Act To Block 'Gag' On Expression

N. E. A. Urged to Protect Freedom of Thought for Teachers, Students.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, July 1.—A group of 30 distinguished educators set out tonight to tear away what they called a "gag" being forced upon the Nation's teachers by "superpatriots" to stifle free expression on social and economic questions.

The move came swiftly after the annual convention of the National Education Association was rapped to order.

Prof. Clyde R. Miller, of Teachers College, Columbia University, speaking for the group, said the self-organized committee sent letters to the three candidates for the association's presidency asking them to give a clear-cut statement of their stands on academic freedom.

"We believed that one of the most crucial issues now before the American public in all education institutions is the protection of academic freedom for teacher and student to consider fairly and fully any social or economic issue, and the preservation of a free press," the letter said.

The candidates, Agnes Samuelson, State superintendent of education in Iowa; Annie C. Woodward, Somerville, Mass., teacher, and Caroline S. Woodruff, Castleton, Vt., normal school teacher, were called upon to "make clear to the members whether, if elected, you will take steps to make immediately effective concrete machinery of cooperation for defense of academic freedom and the preservation of a free press."

Prof. Miller said the group "wants the convention to do something more than pass a resolution."

The statement called upon the association and affiliated organization not only to affirm their stand for academic freedom but to "proceed at once to provide adequate co-operative machinery with other national organizations to protect academic freedom in particular cases of violation as well as to educate the public and the profession itself on the underlying democratic reason for academic freedom and a free press."

Calling for Federal financial aid for adult education in a forum address to 6,000 delegates, J. W. Studebaker, Federal commissioner of education, said:

"I want educators, not politicians, to manage the education of adults."

His forum remarks preceded a night session at which Dr. Henry Lester Smith, of Indiana University, president of the N. E. A., told the assembled teachers a three-fold responsibility is theirs."

Dr. Smith said the schools must help graduates to obtain employment, assume an even greater share of protecting the "moral welfare of school children" and co-ordinate education agencies to prevent "a loss in effective social service."

Studebaker declared "we are not well schooled in the United States," in speaking at the forum on adult education, in which outstanding educators participated.

The commissioner called himself a "rugged individualist" and said he objected "to pestiferous Federal control of education in our communities."

"The Federal Government can distribute money from its wealth to finance forums throughout the country for adult education without objectionable Federal control."

Studebaker said he did not "want to see politicians wandering around the country propagandizing those whom they can regarding the concepts of our national life."

Florence Hale, former N. E. A. president, admonished the teachers "to tell our masses of people to ask questions and when Huey Long says 'shut up,' don't you shut up."

Prof. Lyman Bryson of Columbia University Teachers College quoted Senator Long as telling followers: "If you don't understand, shut up and believe."

Bryson condemned as "stupid" any idea that adult education should be postponed because of depressive economic conditions.

"We shouldn't postpone this highly important movement until people once more are so well-fed and prosperous they can't think of anything else but how well fed and prosperous they are."

Studebaker described democracy as a "race between education and the chaos of ignorance, which if we lose it, will replace democracy with a dictatorship."

He urged establishment of adult educational forums in all cities similar to that set up in Des Moines, Iowa, to which he said 70,000 adults came to learn.

Cabinet Order Helping Exiles Due in Mexico

New Cabinet Discusses Act to Drop Charges of Rebellion.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, July 1.—Mexico's new cabinet held its first session today, and a semiofficial source said an order would be announced shortly, paving the way for scores of political and religious exiles to return to the country.

The cabinet, it was reported, discussed a decree already drawn up by President Lazaro Cardenas instructing civil and military prosecutors to drop charges of rebellion pending against exiles.

There was no official indication that any action was taken to relax the anti-church campaign, but a general belief prevailed that the government would move in this direction. Informed observers believed it might take the form of a withdrawal by state governors of decrees issued several months ago in 14 states closing all churches and expelling priests.

Priests to Be Limited.

This would restore the former status, under which a limited number of priests was allowed to officiate in each state.

The federal government, it was pointed out, made no changes in religious laws during the recent anti-church agitation and therefore it was not expected to act further by decree than it already has done in rescinding a decree preventing the circulation of religious and anti-government publications in the mails.

Among those in exile are Mgr. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, papal delegate, who is now in San Antonio, Tex., and at least five Catholic bishops. Former President Adolfo de la Huerta is in Los Angeles and two former presidential candidates, Jose Vasconcelos and Gilberto Valenzuela, are in political exile.

Socialist Program to Go On.

It was understood the socialistic education program will not be dropped. Private schools would be allowed to reopen, said reliable sources, but the government will dictate the course of study in line with the socialistic policies.

After a 3½-hour session of the cabinet, Silvano Barba Gonzalez, secretary of the interior, said: "Only routine matters were discussed and each secretary rendered a report."

San Antonio, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, exiled apostolic delegate to Mexico, tonight said he would leave for Mexico immediately after he has been advised he may return.

The venerable prelate has been making his home at the Incarnate Word College since October, 1932, when he had to flee from Mexico to escape imprisonment under the anti-church laws.

$25,000 Heart Balm Cut to Mere $350

New York, July 1 (AP).—The $25,000 heart balm that a sheriff's blue ribbon jury of millionaire clubmen awarded to pretty Vera K. Grove shrank to $350 today.

Supreme Court Justice Edward S. Dore ruled that Henry Kravis Taylor, radio actor, need pay the former nightclub entertainer only the $150 down payment, and the balance of $200, which he promised by way of settlement of her claim last September.

The "big money" jury required less than an hour to fix the $25,000 award for Vera after listening to her tale of how Taylor called her "Baby" and "Snugs" and how he had written her that "everything I have is yours."

Mlle. Laval Romance Will Ally Her to U.S.

By the Associated Press.

Mlle. Marie Jose Laval, daughter of the French premier, soon may have an odd claim to American citizenship under an old law which conferred it upon all direct descendants of Lafayette.

Count Rene Adelbert Pineton de Chambrun, to whom she is engaged, is a direct descendant of America's famous French friend. Citizenship of French wives follows that of their husbands.

Count Chambrun is the son of Clara Longworth Chambrun, a sister of the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth. By her marriage, Mlle. Laval will become a cousin of Longworth's daughter, Paulina.

Paulina and her mother, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, will leave for France this month to visit the Chambruns.

Doctor Kenna, Psychiatrist, Dies in Office

Dr. William Matthew Kenna, senior assistant physician at St. Elizabeths Hospital, fell dead in his office at 4:15 yesterday afternoon. He was 66 years old.

The distinguished psychiatrist, who had been on the staff of the hospital for the past 12 years, had just returned from a rather emotional farewell party tendered one of his supervisors, Charles Harbaugh, who had been with the hospital longer than any one person, having come there in 1889.

Dr. Kenna was alone in his office at the time. Two women physicians, who were across the hall, heard the fall, rushed into his room and found him on the floor.

The doctor was a graduate of Yale University and the medical school there, to which he returned as an assistant professor of nervous and mental diseases for several years.

During the war he was a captain in the Medical Reserve Corps. After the armistice he joined the Public Health Service and was in charge of the veterans suffering mental diseases. In 1923 he joined the staff of St. Elizabeths where he was in charge of one of the male services. He lived on the grounds of the hospital.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bertha Bishop Kenna; a brother, Frank Kenna, who is an attorney in New Haven, Conn., and a sister, Elizabeth K. Kenna, of Hartford, Conn.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at the new chapel in Arlington Cemetery.

Work Surety Bill Changes Are Proposed

Graduated Pay Roll Tax Urged to Lessen Burden.

A series of proposed amendments to the Ellenbogen unemployment insurance bill to bring the provisions of the bill in conformity with the national social security act will be sent today to the Senate District Committee by the District Commissioners.

Salient points of the proposed changes are:

1. Administration of law by a local agency instead of by a Federal agency.

2. Imposition of a 1, 2 and 3 per cent employers graduated pay roll tax instead of a 3 per cent tax for the first year.

3. Exemption of the District from the proposed contribution of 1 per cent of all pay rolls.

4. Requiring contribution by the District, as an employer, only in respect to such employes as do not come within the terms of the retirement act.

5. Requiring contribution by the Federal Government, as an employer, in respect to all employes who do not come within the terms of the retirement act.

Breakdown Feared.

In urging the graduated pay roll tax, the Commissioners said: "It seems to us to be ill-advised to risk the breakdown of a vital reform by making its initial terms too severe on the one hand and too liberal on the other. It is for this reason that the national act imposed a tax in a graduation of 1, 2 and 3 per cent in three succeeding years. We believe it very unwise to depart from that sound principle."

The Commissioners urged that assorted legislation would create spotty conditions of employment; and for that reason favor a unified system of unemployment insurance.

In urging the elimination of the requirement that the District pay 1 per cent of all pay rolls, the Commissioners said the District does not have the $1,500,000 "unless it be for a powerfully compelling reason."

The effect of this District contribution, they said, would be to increase the period of benefit payments from 16 to 26 weeks. "The Federal act contemplates only 16 weeks. Unless many of the States extend this period, we believe it would be unwise to increase it in the District," they said.

Haven for Unemployed.

"The effect of having the benefits run for 26 weeks would be to attract to the District many thousands of persons of a class who desire to work a minimum length of time for a maximum of pay while not working. It would make the District a haven for such unemployed as wish to be unemployed."

In suggesting that the administration of the law be handled by the Commissioners, rather than by a Federal agency, the Commissioners pointed out there is "already too much diffusion and disipation of executive authority in the District. We therefore oppose a further increase in this confusion.

"After all, these are local funds, it is a local problem, the employers are local concerns. We believe that a local board should administer this local law."

. . . He knows Whiskey from the INSIDE of 22 Distilleries!

Mr. G. M. Roberts, Sr., has been distilling whiskey for 44 years. In the course of his career he was associated with 22 American distilleries, in charge of plants in Kentucky, Maryland and Illinois.

Mr. Roberts says: "Hiram Walker's King, Queen and Jack of Clubs taste right because they're made right! They have that good old-fashioned whiskey flavor that's so rich and satisfying. And they're naturally mellow. That's why they're so popular among old-timers who know good whiskey!"

Senate Unit Set to Speed D.C. Security

King Prepares to Call Special Session of His Committee.

Crime Report Is Delayed Anew by Impending House Recess.

Further postponement of action on the District crime report seemed certain yesterday in the House and the Senate District Committee prepared to act on the local social security bills in special session.

Because the House is scheduled to recess Wednesday and Thursday, the weekly meeting of the House District Committee will not be held, unless the House changes its plan, and the crime report, together with the divorce bill, will go over with their prospects of adoption daily growing slimmer.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said that the entire committee would be called together some time this week to act upon the District unemployment insurance, old age pension, and needy blind bills.

Bills in Subcommittee.

While declining to predict what amendments may be adopted, he said that the local bills in all probability would be made to conform to the national social security legislation, which is expected to emerge from conference today. The subcommittee, composed of Senators Copeland (Democrat), New York, and Capper (Republican), Kansas, has not yet reported on the measures, but King said he felt the bills so important that the entire committee will be asked to pass upon them.

A House sub-committee will resume hearings at 10 o'clock this morning to hear opponents of the divorce bill in the District Committee room.

Because next Monday may be the last District day in the House, the fate of the divorce bill is uncertain in view of the postponement of the committee meeting.

Loan Shark Bill Attacked.

The two women members of the House District Committee clashed yesterday over the small loans bill which the District Commissioners are trying to push through Congress before adjournment.

Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, made public a letter in which she asked Chairman Mary T. Norton to withdraw the bill, which was reported favorably last Wednesday. She charged that it is "a notorious loan shark measure" and that it was approved without a quorum present.

Mrs. Norton replied that loan sharks are trying to defeat the measure and stated that Mrs. Jenckes must be misinformed about the legislation.

"Washington loan sharks are now charging interest rates as high as 50 per cent," she said, "whereas this bill would limit small loan interest rates to 2 per cent a month."

The bill is still on the Senate calendar but has encountered opposition every time it was brought up under unanimous consent.

Mrs. Norton Hits Senate's Liquor Plans

Chairman Says She Will Stand By Her House Provision.

Denies Monopoly Hint, Sees End of 'Rotten' Drinks.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, yesterday said the Senate amendment to the ABC board liquor bill is not satisfactory and that she would stand by the House provision restricting the purchase of liquor by retailers to District wholesalers when the measure goes to conference.

The Senate and House disagreement over the highly controversial amendment may result in postponement of passage of the bill until next session of Congress, Mrs. Norton said.

Defends Her Plan.

Mrs. Norton was the author of the House amendment and yesterday she defended it against charges that it would bring about a monopoly. She said her aim was to stop the sale of "rotten liquor" in Washington under false labels and the cheating of the District of taxes.

The Senate amendment places in the hands of the District Commissioners the authority to issue regulations prohibiting local retailers from marketing outside Washington while permitting the ABC board to issue special permits for the importation of liquor if it is not available locally.

Favors ABC Board.

"That seems to me to be giving the District Commissioners the power of monopoly," Mrs. Norton said. "I would favor placing the entire matter in the hands of the ABC board, but I don't see why the Commissioners should have the say about it."

Mrs. Norton said that she had numerous complaints against the sale of "rotten liquor" in Washington and that she believed her amendment would enable the ABC board to fix the responsibility for such sales.

"As for a monopoly," she said, "there is nothing to prevent any wholesale dealers from taking out a license and going into business here if he has the money."

Subsidized Colonization.

Real pioneers will probably convulse with laughter or shake their heads in grave concern for the future of civilization as they read of the persistent squabble over the new FERA colony in Alaska. Not much more than a generation ago men and women were loading their meager possessions into covered wagons and moving out into unknown regions to establish new homes. If they went hungry or died of disease no one in Washington was concerned. If they failed to find adequate shelter and fertile land it was entirely their own responsibility. The first question in their minds was survival, and everything beyond that was something to be thankful for.

Some of the modern Alaska colonists are complaining because they are expected to clear their own land, because houses, roads and schools were not built for them when they arrived and because they are asked to give their children cod liver oil. Thanks to the FERA, these so-called pioneers have all the advantages of a hospital, railroads, radios, imported foods and workmen especially employed to help them establish a community. But even these conveniences do not guarantee a successful outcome—when the project is sponsored by the Government.

It would be a miracle if such a colony could be planted by the FERA without grumbling and complaint. Some of the "pioneers" are obviously relying upon the Government rather than their own energy. If they ultimately become satisfied settlers it will be a remarkable tribute to the officials who planned the undertaking. For experience has shown that "pioneering" under bureaucratic guidance is one of the most difficult tasks ever attempted.

Shortly after the close of the war Great Britain spent considerable sums trying to re-settle unemployed families in the colonies. Only one project in Canada was moderately successful. Several others were almost complete failures in spite of what seem to have been careful preparations. The Alaska venture is not strictly comparable with these British experiments. Nevertheless, they suggest the urgent necessity of taking every precaution against similar fiascoes. Under any circumstances colonization of this sort is an extremely delicate task. Without careful advance planning, failure may be regarded as certain.

Unemployed Youth.

Thousands of young men and women between the ages of 16 and 25, released from schools and colleges in recent years, have been unable to find steady employment or have been compelled to undertake work unsuited to their years or training. The proper placement of the youths who are constantly being added to the laboring forces of the country is a difficult problem at all times—one which this country has sadly neglected to study and entirely failed to solve.

While the prolonged depression has forcibly called attention to the necessity for action, the work relief or educational grants supplied by a temporary organization, such as the newly created National Youth Administration, are scarcely calculated to meet the needs of the case. Furthermore, most of the workers between the ages of 16 and 25 are old enough to be regarded and treated as adults.

Apprenticeship and training for specialized occupations should be carried on under the supervision of officials attached to or closely connected with permanent public employment agencies. The employment agencies, of course, would be expected to cooperate with local educational authorities and direct young persons into suitable occupations, on the basis of their school records. Constant contacts with employers and labor unions would also supply current information as to the state of the labor market and the opportunities open to young people in various industries.

The system developed by Great Britain in dealing with the juvenile unemployed ranging in age from 14 to 18 years offers many valuable suggestions to our own authorities. Special branches of the regular employment exchanges have been established to deal with applicants for jobs. Local advisory committees, representing employers, labor unions, local boards of education and individuals interested in juvenile welfare work also are prepared to furnish advice and guidance. All such committees, however, are under the general control of the Ministry of Labor. Moreover, since boys and girls become eligible for unemployment insurance benefits at the age of 16, they must at all times keep in touch with the employment exchanges. Such systematic provisions to assist the novice seeking private employment offer a striking contrast to the arrangements contemplated by the order establishing the National Youth Administration.

Temporary subsidization of young men and women to keep them off the lists of the unemployed will help to relieve distress for a few months. But when the funds allocated to the Youth Administration have been spent, the problem of finding permanent employment will remain. There is no ready made solution for the unemployment problems of either youth or maturity. But it is certain that a permanent system of employment agencies, equipped to serve workers of all ages, would reduce the number of idle men, increase individual efficiency and improve morale by helping an individual to find the kind of work he is qualified to undertake.

A Hopeful Augury.

By a vote of 216 to 146 the House refused yesterday to incorporate in the utility holding company bill the "death sentence" clause which so narrowly escaped being deleted from the Senate bill. Incredible as it seems, the President appeared to be working feverishly last night to bring about a reversal of that decision. The intimation that acute pressure will be applied to members of the House who followed their own convictions instead of White House dictates is a serious reflection upon Executive judgment. It suggests that the President has completely forgotten the constitutional limitations upon his office. Obviously the House could not yield to this pressure without destroying its self-respect.

Unfortunately the sheep-like conduct of the House on many previous occasions has led to suspicion of its motives when it dares to take an independent stand. Criticism has been accentuated in this case by refusal of the House to permit a record vote. That was a needless blunder. For if the Administration should desire to "discipline" Democrats who defied the President, it will not be prevented by ignorance from carrying out its intention. Moreover, these Congressmen may be held up to public scorn by Administration supporters as servile tools of the private utility interests.

It will be difficult, however, to convince the public that the House majority on this occasion failed to express its honest convictions. Self-respecting legislators must resent the attitude of those who calmly take for granted that their votes have been determined by persuasive propaganda or influenced by ulterior considerations.

It would be a great pity to permit a discussion of hidden motives to distract attention from the merits of the question presented to the House. That body was asked to decide whether it preferred reasonable regulation to indiscriminate destruction of holding companies in the name of regulation. Whatever the motives of the 216 may have been, their decision was wise, and it is to be hoped that it will be upheld in the coming contest between House and Senate.

As Representative Huddleston said in his able address on the "death sentence" clause, "let us have done with this talk of propaganda." Look at the question on its merits. Thus viewed the position taken by the House is economically sound. As a revolt against efforts at executive dictation, it is a hopeful political augury. It is also an encouraging indication that votes can not be swung merely by attributing base motives to those who try to protect legitimate private enterprise against destructive forms of legislation.

Work Relief Project?

Something less than 100 years ago—in January of 1848, to be precise—men digging a mill-race for a California pioneer by the name of Sutter turned up gold. The resultant westward surge of population, eager to start burrowing with pick and shovel, did much to hasten realization of the Nation's wealth. Today, with its riches pretty thoroughly exploited and its people, Midas-like, starving in the midst of plenty, the Treasury proposes to reverse the process, putting the gold back in the earth. The idea seems to be that mid-continental vaults will protect from foreign hands a currency basis which our own people are not allowed to possess.

But is it really fear that prompts this scheme? May not a more rational explanation be found in the fact that the work-relief program is hung up for lack of digging projects. This money must be spent, it seems. Very well, let a hole be dug in Kentucky: that will dispose of $450,000. And then, when that hole is finished and that money spent, perhaps the gold can be taken up and another hole dug, and so on.

Too bad that politically dubious Vermont is so close to Canada, which according to some of our generals, must be closely watched for aggressive intent on our security. It would never do to bury our gold in that part of the country, more's the pity. For if the gold hole could only be dug in the deep granite of the Green Mountains, there's no telling how much more than $450,000 could be spent in the undertaking. As it is, a calculation indicates that to use up the work relief fund the gold would have to be buried and reburied ten thousand times.

Glorious Dust.

There is a considerable reaction against the authorities' resolve to make room for more heroic ashes in Westminster Abbey. The plan necessitates exhumation of the bodies of many whose reputations have dwindled. Champions of the forgotten heroes are not ready to admit, however, that they will remain forgotten.

Few will deny that Westminster has provided a last earthly home for some personages who, in the light of subsequent research, ceased to be personages altogether—becoming mere minor persons shortly after their retirement to the cloistered abode of British fame. But the critics seem to think that a tomb-ticket to Westminster is a contract that can't be revoked except by consent of both the parties thereto.

It works harshly all around. History is a fickle jade. A man dies in a blaze of popularity and is buried, accordingly, in Westminster. Two decades later, he may be infamous. Or he dies unknown, the very record of his obscure resting-place is lost—and in 40 years his significance to society is recognized.

On the whole, it would ameliorate future trouble if the managers of burying grounds for national heroes instituted a sort of novitiate. There might be, for preliminary committal, a non-committal plot outside the Abbey: a plot where all recently deceased men and women suspected of greatness would be entombed until enough time had elapsed—if enough time ever can—to insure the stability of the renown involved.

"Count no one happy until he is dead," wrote the Latin sage. "Call no one famous," it could then be said, "until he has passed out of probation and into Westminster."

Taxation Or Inflation.

Senator Vandenberg believes that the country is facing a choice between uncontrollable inflation and heavily increased taxation. "As between these alternatives," he says, "I choose taxation." Consequently he has joined other Congressmen in demanding a tax bill for revenue in place of the Administration's "appeal to mass prejudice."

Uncontrollable inflation bringing with it rapidly mounting living costs would certainly be one of the most erratic and inequitable forms of wealth redistribution conceivable. "No amount of taxation could be as burdensome or confiscatory," the Senator rightly says, "as an inflation spree." Yet the danger of such a debauch becomes increasingly great as deficits mount and nothing is done to curb spending or to increase inadequate tax revenues.

As a liberal, favoring increased taxation of the rich and heavy inheritance taxes, provided they are not so high as to destroy wealth-producing industries, Senator Vandenberg speaks on this subject with convincing force. He points out that the so-called soak-the-rich taxes will provide a mere fraction of the revenues needed to overtake our "tragically mounting deficits." The income tax base, he says, must be broadened to provide needed revenues. Millions of our citizens must contribute to the upkeep of the Government in accordance with their ability to pay. Such an extension of direct taxes will have a salutary effect, furthermore, by bringing home to the country the need of economy.

Another requisite of a sound tax program is that it must be "practical." That is, it must be imposed with some regard for the effect of new taxes upon the persons and things taxed. Thus, if taxes upon corporations are made excessively heavy, business recovery will be retarded and a reduction in taxable income will follow. As the earnings of a business concern are disbursed in the form of interest, dividends and profits, it would probably be better at this time, as Senator Vandenberg suggests, "to emphasize taxation upon the individual after the earnings of business have been distributed to him."

Since Congress is to be held in session to put through a tax program, it ought not to shirk the responsibility for enacting a "real" tax bill that will provide safeguards against inflation and strengthen the public credit. If it is content to offer the people a "mere sop to political strategy," by passing the inadequate kind of measure desired by the Administration, it will do so with full knowledge of neglected opportunities. Senator Vandenberg and a number of like-minded colleagues have pointed the way, burdensome though it may appear, to a solution of our budgetary difficulties. If Congress refuses to follow their lead, there will be only one alternative to continued deficits and inflation dangers. That is a drastic curtailment of governmental spending.

There's no music like that of a bagpipe.—Ramsay MacDonald. There's always something to be thankful for if we'll only look for it.

Almost any march toward war is a goose step.

One of the biggest problems concerning cotton is how to persuade women to wear it.

Only in the rarest of cases do pacts insure pax.

Then there are golfers who put two and two together and arrive at—three.

An American Cultural Pact.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Pacts are fashionable nowadays, and that signed in Washington by representatives of all the 21 countries in the Pan-American Union is one that deserves approval. It follows a resolution adopted by the Montevideo Conference of 1933, providing for the protection of all cultural institutions in time of war. There will be on this continent no repetition of such outrages as accompanied the invasion of Belgium and France by the German armies. There will be no fighting against art and education. A list of all cultural institutions within its boundaries is to be compiled by each nation.

"This treaty," said President Roosevelt when it had been signed, "possesses a spiritual significance far deeper than the text itself. It is but one of the many expressions of that basic doctrine of continental responsibility and continental solidarity which mean so much to the present and to the future of the American republics." Whatever quarrels may unfortunately arise in the future among them, the great works of civilization will escape mutilation. They seek a common good which the fury of national feeling should not divert.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Fumes In Buses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent letter to your paper I endeavored to point out the superiority of the street car over bus service, from a mass transportation standpoint, in Washington.

For the enlightenment of the writer of a letter to The Post under date of June 29, ridiculing my knowledge in regard to transportation problems gained from years of travel throughout the United States—since he particularly referred to a "ride up Madison avenue" in New York in one of the new buses, I quote from two letters to the New York Times from other writers which shows this is anything but a "perfect" ride:

A correspondent complains of the foul air inside the new Madison avenue buses. These vehicles also emit dense clouds of fumes which penetrate into the dwellings along the route and cause almost continuous irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, thus constituting a very real menace to health.

We must admit that the Madison avenue buses are a great improvement over the old street cars and that the public is making use of them in great numbers. However, I find that they are almost unbearable in these summer days because of the heat and the nauseating gases that permeate them.

With summer barely begun, the Madison avenue bus riders will probably be some other kind of riders before the summer is over—and that will probably apply to Washington also—and they will be on the street cars again when the snowdrifts get deep and the streets covered with ice. If the Capital Transit Co. will purchase and put in service as soon as possible new and modern cars there will be no kick from car riders, although automobile drivers, of course, will still consider them passe.

Criminals And Paroles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent letter in The Post from Mr. LaRoe, of the local parole board, indicates he believes its activities should be extended, not curtailed.

I wonder if Mr. LaRoe realizes the deep and lasting resentment growing in the minds of thinking people as a result of the doings of not only the local board, but of parole boards in general. The Dillingers, Nelsons, and, it would be safe to say, nearly all the dangerous criminal leaders of today, are the product of the parole system. The death of Carter Baum and many other brave officers, lies very close to the door of boards which assumed to nullify the verdict of a jury and the sentence of a judge, and turned these human tigers loose.

Nobody doubts the wisdom of parole in exceptional cases, but the release of hardened criminals, many with a record of paroles already violated, makes the parole board the criminals' most efficient ally.

Heroes Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I add to what was published in your columns yesterday in the letter captioned "Hamilton's Patriotism," by "A Democrat Who Is No Communist?" I quite agree with the inference of the writer that our heroes of peace are far greater than our heroes of war.

I would not detract from the courage and valor of our war heroes, but I do feel that it takes a greater courage and an even finer valor for men in peace-time public service to fight for the right to stand up against the serried partisan ranks of prejudice and leadership domination and to withstand the pressure of partisan patronage and partisan Presidential favor than to don a uniform and shoulder a rifle in war time—theirs "not to reason why." While the letter of the "Democrat Who Is No Communist," in quoting President Jefferson, does set forth the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian and, it seems to me true, democracy, there might be added to the quotations a short sentence from our Declaration of Independence, also written by Thomas Jefferson, about "swarms of officers" sent to regiment Americans by King George III: "He has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat (but not destroy or plow up) our substance."

Some "horse and buggy days" we have returned to.

The Upkeep Of Parks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are some curious inconsistencies in the apportionment of public funds.

Lovers of trees and parks, which add so greatly to the beauty and charm of Washington, were cheered to read recently of an extra grant to carry on the valuable work of the National Capital parks and to extend the park areas of the city. Meanwhile the parks that already exist go unwatered, unweeded and unkempt for lack of adequate maintenance funds.

I look out of our windows and across the street to see the grass of our local small triangle burning brown for lack of sprinkling and growing messy and unkempt for lack of policing. After every public holiday all of our parks present a disgusting spectacle. They are a mess of flying newspapers and scattered litter, such as no other country would tolerate and very few communities even in this country.

Instead of spending millions for more unnecessary construction and destruction, such as the indefensible devastation of the Mall and Botanic Garden, a large proportion of these sums might much more profitably be spent for upkeep and maintenance.

Echo Of Dr. Wirt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How about Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind. A little more than a year ago the doctor tried to impress upon a House committee the havoc that might result if the Brain Trust's influence were not curtailed.

The farseeing educator had an idea that the Brain Trusters were steering the course of events toward a "revolution." He referred to a "plot" to establish a dictatorship—that we were on the way to a Kerensky and a Stalin.

He may have been short on facts of probative value, but from what has transpired since the doctor was put on the spot by the House committee it looks very much as if he wasn't far wrong in his conclusions.

The Immunity Of The Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress on the matter of suits by holders of gold-clause bonds, employed language respected by every lawyer in America. The President said, "There is no constitutional or inherent right to sue the Government; on the contrary, the immunity of the sovereign from suit is a principle of universal acceptance and permission to bring such suit is an act of grace, which with us may be granted or withheld by the Congress." That a State may not be sued without its consent is a fundamental rule of jurisprudence . . . established by repeated decisions of this court that the entire judicial power granted by the Constitution does not embrace authority to entertain a suit brought by private parties against a State without consent given (256 U. S. 490). Chief Justice Hughes emphasizes the above language in 290 U. S. 26.

The earliest and most conspicuous case on immunity in American law annals is the famous case of The Exchange, 7 Cranch, 116. The Exchange, owned by a Baltimore merchant named McFadden, was a schooner seized by the French off the coast of Spain in 1808, and some two years later appeared in Philadelphia as a "public armed boat" of the French. The rightful owners of the vessel immediately libeled her in the local Federal court, and through the usual steps familiar to lawyers the case reached the Supreme Court. The Attorney General of the United States had intervened with a statement that this vessel was the property of a foreign sovereign with whom the United States was at peace and therefore the case was out of order on the ground that action would not lie against the sovereign without his consent. John Marshall gave a lengthy opinion, rich with sound reasoning, on the subject, ordering the boat released and restored to the foreign sovereign, even though the rightful owners were American citizens, from whom the vessel had been taken by force without compensation. Some 25 years later the heirs of the owners of the boat received $39,000 as their share of the money paid by France as indemnity under the treaty of 1831.

In the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, Horace Gray made a decision in the Light-Boat Cases (1865), which was approved by the highest courts of England and constantly cited by our own Supreme Court. It contained all the valid reasons supporting the policy of immunity of the sovereign.

The one outstanding case where the Supreme Court permitted a suit to be maintained, and a case of national interest, was that of United States vs. Lee, which involved title to the Arlington estate. This property had been acquired in 1864 under the war powers of the Government, through act of Congress, and was held and occupied by the Government for about 18 years for public use—a cemetery for deceased soldiers of the Union Army, for a fort and educational purposes. In 1881 the devisees of the original owners brought suit to recover the property in a State court of Virginia. The action was promptly removed by certiorari to the Federal court, where a motion was made by the Attorney General that the court had no jurisdiction and asking that the case be dismissed. Plaintiff demurred and was sustained. It was another case of trying the title to property, and the Supreme Court by a 5-to-4 decision found against the Government.

The President is vigilant in protecting the rights of all the people against the wiles of a mischievous minority.

The courts will always be open to those who seek justice, but they must never be permitted to degenerate into collection agencies.

Playing The Iron Ponies.

Post Office, Tuesday.

OF course, there's a revolution going on in railroading, but it doesn't consist of streamlined passenger trains that make record-breaking runs. At least, these are only lesser parts or minor manifestations of the big turnover.

"When you've got a crack streamlined passenger train," inquired our friend the Railroader, "why, what have you got?"

Not much—or so we understood him to imply. Not, we understood him to imply, half the battle.

Think of the problems that remain:

Under a speed of 70 miles an hour, wind resistance is unimportant. No streamlining can greatly reduce it when a side wind blows from a forward angle. As so far developed, the shrouding and sheathing hamper inspection, increase maintenance difficulties and raise costs. The high price of equipment lessens the saving made by Diesel-electric fuel. And articulated units mean inflexible trains, awkward when repairs are required, hard to alter on a long run with fluctuating traffic.

"And then what about the roadbed?" demanded our friend, the Railroader. "If you bank your curves so's a streamlined passenger can take 'em on the hop, your freight's going to have a hard time negotiating 'em.

"Which problem," said our friend the Railroader, "brings us to the heart of the whole matter. The streamline passenger train isn't going to get the railroads out of trouble—because passenger trains isn't the chief factor in railroad revenues. The chief factor in railroad revenues is freight. Railroads never did make on passengers more'n a sixth of what they made on freight. When times are good it's freight that pays the dividends—and when times are bad, it's the sick freight department that sends for the receiver. The railroads have got to give more thought to their freight departments than to their passengers' speed."

And when our Railroader friend had left for the airport to look at a new type of plane, we discovered that the railroads were doing just what he said they should do. We had talked in the lobby of his hotel, and he left behind him a copy of Forbes' Magazine open at an article by Harwood F. Merrill. We read that article, or part of it, and we strongly suspect that our friend the Railroader had been reading it, too.

Mr. Merrill says that the real railroad revolution "is now taking place in laboratories and shops where ways are being found to reduce the enormously expensive excess weight of freight cars."

He says: "For every ton of deadweight which is replaced by a ton of freight, the railroad saves $13 per car per year. Nearly 2 of every five tons in the weight of the average freight car loaded is deadweight. If each of the 1,400,000 freight cars now running were reduced 2 tons in weight, without cutting capacity, railroad costs would be slashed by more than $150,000,000 a year."

Mr. Merrill tells of the development of a new hopper-car providing even more than this six-ton saving "over conventional 50-ton hopper cars—and yet it carries 12 tons more of coal." Many car builders believe, says this writer, "that it is now possible to build a car equal to existing ones in size and strength, but weighing just half as much."

"Furthermore," says Mr. Merrill, "the steam locomotive has been forging ahead steadily in both efficiency and usefulness. Boiler-pressures have jumped from 200 pounds per square inch to 300 pounds and higher; steam-temperatures have risen from 650 to nearly 800 degrees. Consequently, freight-train speeds are 50 per cent higher, on the average, than they were 10 years ago; mileage between heavy repairs has nearly doubled, and locomotive runs are greatly extended.

Mr. Merrill's is a broad, but rosy, view of both the freight-train's future and the passenger-train's. Here are some of the new ideas that he sees rushing down the tracks from the near future:

"Small, light freight-cars which can run off the rails onto a new set of wheels and then roll off along the highway. Centralized traffic-control, whereby one man can control movements over an entire division. Streamlined freight-cars. Telephone communication between the ends of long freight-trains. Pneumatic-tired rail-cars. Double-decked passenger-cars—shades of Paris!—for suburban-service. Locomotives and cars which glide along on roller-bearings."

In a word, the railroads' passenger problems will be solved, and the railroads' freight problems will be solved—all except the little side-issue as to where the freight is to come from, and who's going to buy it when it arrives.

The Power Trust

"YOU knew one thing," said Pete, the taxi driver, "I was glad to see the power trust win yesterday because I'm telling you honestly in all the years I've been hearing about what a menace they were this is the first time I ever heard of them winning. Oh, of course, they may have won in a lot of State fights but I mean in what they call the national arena. Ever since I've been driving this here cab around here I've been hearing our politicians screaming the power trust was after them. I think it was sort of a complex with them, don't you?

"Now, there's that little boy, Rush Holt. He said the power trust was after him, that it was really the power trust that was trying to keep him from being seated. Now you know that's silly. What did the power trust care about him? But even say they were after him, well, they didn't get him, did they? In fact, I've never seen them get anybody or win anything. So I think that after all these years of being a terrible influence in the body politic they were certainly entitled to one victory.

• • • •

"I can remember when Senator Norris used to hold up a chart showing one company linked to another all over the place and he would say the power trust was dominating the country. It was a wicked looking thing, that chart was. Its tentacles spread all over the wall. About this time the Senate was acting on a resolution to investigate the trust and Norris screamed that the power trust was defeating it. Well, sir, it was finally voted to let the Federal Trade Commission do the investigating and if the power trust calls that a victory it can have it. The commission gave it just about the darndest investigation that anybody ever got.

"Even Mr. Hoover's managers, when he was running for the Republican nomination, used to say the power trust was doing everything they could to defeat him on account of his being for the people, while they were not for the people at all. Well, they certainly weren't victorious.

"Then, when Mr. Roosevelt got presidential ants in his pants one of the first squawks his managers made was that the power trust was trying to head him off. I remember just as well when Mr. Hearst threw the nomination to him he said it was because the power trust was trying to deny Mr. Roosevelt the nomination to put one of their own men in. Well, that's another defeat you've got to chalk up against them. Honestly, I never did hear of them winning until yesterday.

"It's funny about Mr. Hearst, too, because after saving Mr. Roosevelt from the power trust at Chicago he is now trying to save the power trust from Mr. Roosevelt. I guess he figures neither one should be after the other, don't you?

• • • •

"And how about the election of Mr. Roosevelt after he got the nomination? If the power trust was against him at Chicago they certainly must have been against him in the presidential campaign. Maybe it was their vicious influence that kept him from getting the remaining six States, eh?

"Even old Chester Davis, the farm administrator, he said not long ago that the power trust was trying to take away the farmers' processing taxes. I guess he really believes this, too. I know I hear a lot of the New Dealers talk and they certainly do seem to fear the power trusts. Mr. Roosevelt must fear them a lot himself. It's the only time he seems to get really mad. In fact, he says he doesn't object to investment trusts but he wants to get the holding companies out of the management of the operating companies to destroy their great power and influence.

"What I can't understad is what power and influence is it they have? I remember that time they tried to use this power and influence against Senator Norris in Nebraska. They were supposed to be the ones to put another man named Norris on the ticket to confuse the voters. Well, I can't see where they yielded any power and influence. Everybody laughed and said if it was really the power trust who did this they certainly were stupid.

"Oh, I'm not denying the power trust is a vicious influence. It must be, because Mr. Roosevelt and Senator Norris say so. But I don't see how anybody can begrudge them their victory yesterday. A vicious influence ought to win at least once to hold its reputation as an influence."

"Well, here's where you get out."

Corn Belt Feels Its Way

Iowa State College Institute Reveals Difference Between Theory And Despair Of The City And Facts And Confidence Of Agricultural Areas In Facing Nation's Future.

By Hilding Siverson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ames, Iowa.

IN the midst of the general clamor over the economic plight of the farmer there came a somewhat refreshing variation of a few days ago when there was held the "First Annual Country Life Institute" at Iowa State College, under the general direction of President R. M. Hughes. The general theme of the institute, as announced, was "The Outlook for Country Life in the Corn Belt."

It was not possible to omit economics, of course, for there were talks on "The Future of Agricultural Adjustment" and "Commercial Agriculture and the National Welfare," but more emphasis was placed on "Future Town-Country Relationships," "Reorganizing Rural Education," "New Ways of Financing Rural Education," and like topics.

The principal speakers were Dr. John D. Black, of Harvard; Dr. J. H. Kolb, of Wisconsin; Dr. Paul R. Mort, Dr. O. E. Baker, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, of New York; Dr. T. B. Manny, Miss Leah Brunk and Miss Agnes Samuelson. Associate leaders included farmers, school superintendents, editors, ministers, doctors, business and professional men, teachers and others. About 300 community leaders attended.

Perhaps the most radical utterances of the conference were made by Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, of New York, who spoke on "The Farmer in a Disintegrating Industrial Society." He contended that the farmers had better join hands with labor in this country—or else.

However, this statement may not be startling, after all, for scarcely a week passes but that some speaker prophesies the downfall of the Nation or the universe, unless something is done about it, the speaker helpfully supplying the alternative.

• • • •

THE interesting thing in this connection was a study of comparative psychology, taking Dr. Niebuhr as typical of the urban point of view and the native Iowans as typical of the rural attitude.

Dr. Niebuhr is very much of an alarmist. He declared in his speech that the disintegration of civilization is sure to come and that the only thing we are likely to do about it is to slow up the process, apply palliatives and make the best of a bad situation. He assured the farmers of the Middle West that they will go down with the rest of the general crash.

His statement was met by a surprising lack of panic. The other speakers went on about their own affairs and talked hopefully about "rurban" relations, educational problems and land utilization, as if nothing had happened. One of the members of the conference casually said that when he had occasion to be in New York he believed Dr. Niebuhr's prophecy implicitly, but as soon as he spent a day in an Iowa farm home he was sure there was nothing to it.

It is comforting, in a day of plentiful prophecies of disaster arising from the putative breakdown of business economics, to mingle with men and women from the farms and small towns and absorb some of their substantial philosophy. They are the heirs of a culture that was practically self-sufficient. Their fathers and grandfathers came to this country after the Civil War and took their living direct from the soil, producing their own wheat, corn, beef, pork, vegetables, fruit, wool for clothing, fuel and shelter. What happened in the outside world, in such a civilization, was not as important as now, for the farmer could always keep himself and his family alive and even comfortable, regardless of what happened to the dollar or the price of his products.

• • • •

MUCH of this sturdy psychological heritage remains. The average Middle Western farmer is likely to say:

"Why should there be a smash-up of civilization? What is there about the way we live that should cause people to start shooting up the town, killing their neighbors, overturning the Government and going back to savagery? I'm strong enough to keep my way of living in tact. If the rest of the people aren't strong or smart enough to do it, they are mighty stupid. What good is urban progress if it leads to smash, while out alleged backwardness leads to safety. It just doesn't make sense."

And so Iowa State College goes calmly ahead and makes plans for better educational facilities for farmers, better roads, better community recreation, better churches, better libraries, concert halls, museums, colleges, sanitation, youth movements, relief work, and so on, just as if no one had prophesied that within a few years this will be a howling wilderness of primitive tooth-and-claw savages tearing at each other's throats. This is the "first" institute, and there will be a second and a third, and a fourth, and more. These people are real optimists.

Those who get jittery from listening to metropolitan oracles of doom should come out to the broad prairies of the Mississippi Valley and renew their faith in the United States of America and its traditional courage and optimism.

• • • •

TO be sure, there are quack doctors prescribing all sorts of unworkable and expensive nostrums for curing ills of agriculture, advocating crop destruction and proposing to dictate the conduct of individual farms from Washington swivel-chairs, but as soon as this part of the country gets a good crop or two, the quacks will go the way of their predecessors. Out of all the waste and hubbub and snarls of red tape and the flood of oratory and spilled ink will come a measure of forward movement, after all.

The American people have a genius for working out of such messes and of extracting some good out of even the worst demagoguery. This was done in the nineties, and it will be done in this era. There will be an inching forward, and the forward progress will not be recognizably in accordance with brain trust specifications, but according to the common sense of the people themselves, since those who come from the ranks of the people know human nature, whereas the brain truster works on theory, moving human beings around like pawns in a chess game and calculating forces by mechanical ergs and not by throbs and impulses of human nature.

And so there is much hope when leaders like Dr. Hughes are wise enough to provide intellectuals for stimulus and to balance theoretical proddings with the homegrown philosophy of those who bear the burden. It is now time to talk about things other than political. The Corn Belt is feeling its way, cautiously and with both feet on the ground, not to a phoney Utopia, but to a little better state than we had yesterday.

Tennis In France

By Wm. Lyon Phelps.

THROUGH the kindness of M. Didier Poulain, a very able Parisian writer on both sport and literature, whom I met in Paris three years ago in company with the American tennis expert, Mr. John Tunis, I received a formal invitation to attend the French tennis championship matches, and to sit in the space reserved for the American Ambassador and other distinguished guests. I took full advantage of this card of admission; for lawn tennis, when played by experts, is one of the most exciting of all games to watch.

Although the players included probably the best amateurs in the world, Jack Crawford, Fred Perry, Bunny Austin, Baron von Cramm, Borotra, Boussus, Bernard, Menzel, and others, M. Poulain, in an article in L' Auto, expressed what is the general opinion, in saying that owing to the absence of supermen, the tournament is singularly devoid of drama. This is absoultely true. I saw some beautiful tennis. But the terrific thrills of a few years ago, when Tilden, Cochet, and Vines were playing in singles, and Lott, Van Ryn, Borotra, Brugnon, in doubles, are conspicuous by their absence. Not only were Tilden and Cochet supermen, there was, owing to their temperament and personality, a histrionic element in their contests that electrified the crowds.

• • • •

M. Poulain suggests that the only way to bring this thrill back again in the tennis of today is to have an open tournament where our best amateurs will compete with Tilden, Cochet, Vines, Lott and the other great professionals. Certainly that would draw a crowd. For I was astonished at the small size of the attendance here. I saw three beautiful singles matches in succession, won respectively by Austin, Von Cramm (champion last year) and Perry. Very many seats were vacant. This may be partly owing to the fact that the chances of any French player winning this tournament are very slim. But I think it is mainly that the picturesque supermen are not playing amateur tennis. Crawford is called Le Placide Crawford, an adjective no one in his senses would ever have applied to Tilden.

When this article appears in print, we shall know just how good the French are. Their team is already selected, Bernard, Borotra, Boussus, Merlin. Just how good is Bernard? I saw him play on his eighteenth birthday in 1932; and, while he is a very finished player, with an excellent style and good temperament, I do not think he is quite so good today as we thought he was going to be. Still our fine young American player, Wilmer Hines, will remember Bernard to his dying day. In this tournament Hines won the first set, had five games to two and forty-love in the second set, yet Bernard won that set and went on to take the match.

• • • •

Although, in the Davis Cup matches two years ago, Austin should never have beaten Vines, while I was watching Austin play in this tournament a few days ago, it was easy to see how it happened. In order to beat Austin, his opponent must be at his best. Austin, though very slight in build, has the most easy grace and accuracy of any player in this tournament. His volleying is deadly.

It is interesting to see how the game of our young Wilmer Hines impresses the French critics. Tère is a literal translation: "Hines has a poisonous chop stroke which carries ruin."

I must say that the French gallery seemed to me fully as impartial in its applause and behavior as any gallery I have seen elsewhere.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Maugham's "Moon."

YOU wouldn't think a daily diet of new books would give one much chance to catch up with the old. But the opportunity comes with a fresh reprint. I was as pleased as Punch when W. Somerset Maugham's "The Moon and Sixpense" turned up on my desk—(Modern Library, 95 cents)—because for years and years it had been one of those books I had been promising myself I would some day read. We all have our list of books we cherish in an unread condition, misers that most of us are by instinct, though I think new lists could be quite so astonishing as that recently reported by Prof. Felix Frankfurter. As he told the President during a little visit in New London, he—distinguished professor of law at Harvard, acute analyzer of the trouble over the Communists, Sacco and Vanzetti, and member of the one-time Brain Trust—had never read the following works: Karl Marx's "Das Kapital;" Darwin's "Origin of Species," and—absolutely and preposterously incredible as it may seem—the U. S. Constitution. In fact, I simply don't believe that last point, but look for yourself on page 9 of the July 1 issue of Time.

My little lapse with "The Moon and Sixpence" seems very mild by comparison. But I should like to go on record for the encouragement of anyone else who is given to hoarding books thus like old cheese, with testimony that the added flavor is worth the pains.

• • • •

THE great interest of "The Moon and Sixpence" lies not in itself as a story. Candidly, I doubt that I should recommend it as a tale "to hold children from play and old men from the chimney corner." It has neither the intensity nor pace to meet the kind of competition one finds on all sides for summer reading. And perhaps the least appetizing side of this story of the respectable London business man who suddenly chucks his job, wife and family, goes to Paris to paint, and ends up in Tahiti with a native family, leprosy and an indubitable and startling genius, is the fact that we all know exactly what is going to happen. For Charles Strickland is modeled, with more fidelity than novels are accustomed to display, upon the sublime and tragic life story of Paul Gauguin.

That, I believe, suggests the extraordinary merit of this book. Knowing Mr. Maugham's material only less well than he did, we are free to watch how he handles it. Previsioning, we can follow him as he turns the narrative current now this way, now that. Our eyes are cleared to one of the finest sights in the world—the actual, on-the-fire practice of consummate literary craftsmanship. Any would-be writer worth his salt realizes that there are books, very fine books indeed, which leave his writing itch as cold as a dead herring, and that there are others which excite him so that he can scarcely sleep nights for the wheels revolving in his head. "The Moon" is par excellence the latter kind.

Conspicuously among so many books written nowadays—though I must not push it back among the ancients, since it is but 16 years old—"The Moon" illustrates the two cardinal virtues of clarity and suavity. In the telling, Mr. Maugham is never hurried, never off blanance. I shall even risk the possible absurdity of remarking that the coolness of his manner is a tangible, sensous thing, distinctly a blessing on these dog days.

• • • •

ONE more point the would-be writer will observe with some glee. He is often, in his little scribblings, bothered by the gap between his own real, workaday world and the world he is creating in his manuscript pages. The one reason seems all too real, the other all too fanciful.

But let him note, in "The Moon," how the author keeps himself upon the stage as the observer and vehicle of all that happens. What we learn of Charles Strickland is what the "I" of the story, a frankly undisguised Mr. Maugham, learns in the factual-seeming encounters recorded. It is a means, observe, both of bringing the fiction plane down a negotiable level and of lifting the author into that heady world of imaginative events, a means which Mr. Maugham has found useful time and again in his works.

The formula may help others as it has helped him. For some deep inner need, as much as he has dramatized Strickland or Sadie Thompson or anyone else, Mr. Maugham has first of all, always dramatized Mr. Maugham.

Federal Payroll Here Increased to 102,539

May was a big hiring month for Uncle Sam, the Civil Service Commission revealed yesterday. During the month 1,590 were added to Government pay rolls in Washington, which brought the grand total to 102,539. This is the second time in 17 years that the total has been above 100,000.

The pay roll for all Federal workers, outside of Washington included, increased $1,500,000 during May. The entire May pay roll was $108,226,537. Major employers were the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Agricultural Department with its emergency units, the Interior Department and the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Institute Hits U. S. Program For Recovery

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., July 1.—The Administration program of economic planning and work relief was subjected to strong criticism here today as the Institute of Public Affairs began its two-week study of current, national and international problems.

At the morning round table on reconstruction and political and social planning, Dr. Arthur J. Hettinger, jr., Detroit economist, attacked the lack of financial balance and the "irresponsible and disorderly" methods associated with the Government's recovery program.

He contended that, if left alone, any one of the major industries could put to work more men than have been employed through the Governments' two-year program of work relief projects.

For Jeffersonian Plan.

A liberal economic planning based on the foundations of the Constitution was advocated by Dr. Hettinger, who also urged a "flexible, reasonable program based on the Jeffersonian philosophy "that government is best which governs least."

Speaking at the same round table Clarence King, New York social worker, attempted to show the defects of national planning for relief for destitution alone, and the weakness of local relief organizations.

Kink warned against the overwhelming number of local relief set-ups if the work of "caring for our own" were left to the individual communities. He proposed planning neither to the "left" nor the "right," but rather a system which would divide the burden between the various States and the Federal Government.

Fears Monopoly.

He contended that "centralized social planning might well fall into monopolistic control as vicious and impersonal as a large corporation or an autocratic governing bureau."

King said, however, that the Constitution and the "national thought" of the people might well be revised to meet new demands."

Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, Philadelphia author, speaking on reconstruction, criticized the American Government's procedure after the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars.

Richmond Is Ready For Social Security

State Has Setup Needed to Administer Act.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—Arthur W. James, State commissioner of public welfare, today asserted that Virginia already has administrative machinery for handling the more involved features of the new Federal social security act.

"If the administration of the social service provisions of the act, that is, old age pensions and mothers' aid, are placed under the State department of public welfare, it will be necessary only to expand the bureaus of mothers aid and county and city organization bureaus," Mr. James said.

The department has looked forward to and planned the extension and development, Mr. James said.

500 Back to Work At Weirton Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 1.—Five hundred workers of the Clarksburg plant of the Weirton Steel Co. returned to work today, when the plant resumed operation with all 12 hot mills in commission.

Other workers will be taken on as fast as materials are furnished by the hot mills for them, and the entire personnel of 1,200 is expected to be back at work by July 15.

E. E. Paddack, manager, in announcing resumption of operations, said, "We have no idea at present how long it will be possible to operate all 12 of the mills."

Eastern Shore Ready To Fete Tenement Tots

Crisfield, Md., July 1 (AP).—The "friendly towns" of Maryland's lower eastern shore were preparing today to receive their quota of more than 1,200 New York tenement children and give them a real—albeit brief—summer vacation.

The children from the metropolis will begin their annual trek to Crisfield, Princess Anne, Smith's Island, and numerous other points on the Delmarva Peninsula July 8. The first contingent will remain for a week, with another following close on their heels.

Japan to Base Aerial Build-up Upon Civilians

5-Year Plan Aims to Gain Foothold in World Aviation Network.

By the United Press.

Tokyo.—With an initial expenditure of approximately $60,000,000 and appropriations of $1,000,000 a year thereafter, the ministry of communications hopes to turn Japan into a land of fliers and at the same time win world recognition in commercial aviation.

An elaborate program of civil aviation which includes linking Japanese domestic lines with routes connecting the countries of the world has been mapped.

Japan is definitely short of civilian fliers and privately owned planes. Because of the mountainous nature of the country, flying is more hazardous than in the United States. With the air mail and passenger routes spreading over the world, Japan wants a part in the operation of the network. More than anything else, it desires avoiding the charge of backwardness.

Pacific Venture Studied.

Most of the reported suspicions on the part of officialdom regarding the Pan-American transpacific venture are imaginary. Officials do not minimize the importance of an American chain of air stations across the ocean. On the other hand, they do not minimize the importance of fast mails and fast travel.

Officials likewise realize that civilian interest in flying has contributed greatly to these advances. Hence the Japanese plan.

The next Diet session undoubtedly will be asked to provide a fund sufficient to let the government give real encouragement to civil aviation.

To make flying practical and safe for civilians, a large number of emergency landing places will be provided. Schools for fliers will be organized, as will flying clubs to keep interest alive.

The civilian effort will go hand-in-hand with the five-year plan for improving the air defense.

The air defense program will cost some $25,000,000 for the five-year period but most of the money will be spent in building new fields, purchasing new equipment and strengthening air defense generally.

In designing the civilian the so-called "freedom" principle has been kept in mind. The freedom in this case is to make Japan independent of foreign manufacturers of airplanes.

Japanese manufacturers will receive every possible encouragement.

Program Tentatively Drafted.

The tentative draft of the program that is expected to meet approval at an early date follows:

1. Completion and extension of the national air routes. Readjustment of existing airdromes. Establishment of new airdromes. Subsidy for the establishment of local airdromes (30). Establishment of exclusive zones for emergency landings (15). Establishment of air beacons (152) and extension of routes.

2. Opening of regular international air service.

3. Training of crews—1,000 second-class pilots, 400 first-class pilots. Maintenance of crews; training of mechanics, 200; control of training institutes.

4. Control and encouragement of airplane manufacturing.

Establishment of an air laboratory.

5. Popularization of home-made planes.

6. Promotion of air industry.

7. Establishment of the wireless equipments for aviation.

8. Protection and promotion of airships. Technical study.

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. House Rejects Holding Units' 'Death Clause'

Vote Is 216-146; Roosevelt Plans Roll Call Test on Motion Today.

W. Byrns, his tall, gaunt frame towering over colleagues, passed between the tellers in support of the "death sentence." His House whip, Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, voted the other way. The body of Republicans lined up behind their minority leader against the amendment.

It was probably the worst trimming of Mr. Roosevelt's presidential career. The President was turned back in the Senate on World Court adherence, but by a narrower margin. His St. Lawrence Treaty was sidetracked. And once, in the New Deal's infancy, he was overridden by Congress on veterans' economies.

Yesterday's vote was fraught with greater political significance than all three others combined. The immediate effect may show itself in a widening rift with the recently co-operative House. But the long-distance consequences may reverberate down through the next two years in every congressional district.

"Lobby" in White House.

Weeks ago, House leaders had warned the President that House sentiment was predominantly against dissolution. But the President insisted on a fight to the finish, and personally injected himself into the controversy through a White House attack on the power lobby. To offset utility lobby gains, the Administration's own agents were sent to the Capitol. One report was that an office in the new House Office Building—Room 1333—was set aside for interviews with balking members. It was a struggle of lobby against lobby. Until the last head was told, victory was confidently claimed by opposing factions.

Debate dragged on after yesterday's tide-turning vote, and two other amendments were attached to the bill.

One, by Representative Joseph P. Monaghan (Democrat), Montana, would prohibit registered utility holding companies from contributing to party or individual political campaigns. Defeated on a division count, the Monaghan amendment was later accepted by a 114 to 104 teller vote.

A second amendment, sponsored by the Interstate Commerce Committee, provided that nothing in the bill could be construed as affecting validity of any existing contracts or notes. At the same time, this provided that such action could not be used in the courts as an argument that Congress approves of such contracts.

The aftermath following the "death sentence" vote brought a series of conflicting interpretations from both sides of the Capitol.

Conceding the bill might be killed as a result of House action, Senator Wheeler declared the issue "will be carried to the country."

"I have not the slightest doubt about where the country stands," said the Montanan. "The fight will be carried into every congressional district."

Norris Hits "Trust."

Senator Norris said the outcome was "disastrous."

"It shows that the power trust with its millions is more influential than the people," said the Nebraska liberal. "It was their propaganda that won in the House. I do not think it can win with the people."

Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, protege of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, introduced a resolution for appointment of a special committee "to investigate the propaganda which has been and is going on throughout the Nation regarding Federal legislation on the subject of the public utility holding companies and the efforts which have been made and are being made to influence the action of Congress regarding such legislation."

Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, who made a stirring House appeal for the "death sentence" amendment to his own bill, rushed to the Senate after the vote, presumably to confer with Vice President Garner and other leaders there.

But Garner, in his long public career, has lived through many such setbacks. If he was disturbed by the Administration's licking, it was not reflected in his conduct. Half an hour after Rayburn's departure he was reported "taking a nap."

Huddleston Jubilant.

One outspoken House opponent of the "death sentence," Representative George Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama, was jubilant.

"We have just taken back into our hands the right to legislate for the United States," he informed colleagues. "We have just shown that we are unwilling to submit to the dictates of the power companies or of the Chief Executive and his minions.

"Again has the House of Representatives shown that it is worthy and worthwhile. Again have we shown our loyalty to our American institutions. Let us preserve this bill and vote down these amendments that come from those who, having been defeated in an open, square, honest fight, now seek to enfilade and strike us from the rear."

A new "Declaration of Independence for the House" was hailed by Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, who said members had taken this means of "celebrating the Fourth by asserting their independence."

He asked Representative Rankin if his warning of a "day of reckoning" meant more Democrats "will be called into room 1333 of the new House Office Building," from which he insists the Administration is directing its own lobby.

There was little penitence apparent among the Democrats who deserted the Administration. Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, said he had been called a "liberal" and a "progressive," but no one could add to that the appellation "destroyer."

Exponents of the "death sentence" for "unnecessary" utility holding companies, on the other hand, gave no evidence of relenting.

"You've got to cut them down before you can regulate them," asserted Representative Rayburn.

"The American people have been influenced by a catch phrase," said Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas. "There's no 'death sentence' in this bill."

It was Representative Rayburn who concluded House arguments for the "death sentence," in a speech that brought ringing applause from his Democratic followers.

"For some of us this is the day we sought, and mourned because we found it not," he said. "For some of us it means a struggle in our districts next year. I know the political and financial power of the people with whom I have to deal. I despise their methods of fallacious profits. Some of them have been using the investors in this fight, and a man named Magill is one of them. He got $1 from each of them.

"Will the members of this House stand by the chosen leader of the people, or one who helped to fleece the investors? I told these people in the committee fight the same thing I told them in the contest over the securities act and over the stock market act. I told them I wanted to get the desperadoes out of this business, to get rid of the leeches and the bloodsuckers and all of those who have milked the public."

The so-called "death sentence" involved the question of whether utility holding companies not geographically or economically integrated should be liquidated by 1940. The House bill, adhered to yesterday, delegates this power of dissolution—where necessary in the public interest—to the Security and Exchange Commission.

The next House test, probably today, will come on a roll call vote to substitute the Senate bill and its "death sentence" features for the House measure. Another record vote may come on a motion to instruct the conferees to insist on the "death sentence."

Experts Seek Cause of Blast That Killed 4

3 Investigations Started of Pepco Explosion and Blast Saturday.

Three inquiries were under way yesterday as electrical experts sought to determine the cause of Saturday's transformer explosion at the Potomac Electric Power Co.

With four workmen dead and a fifth seriously burned in Emergency Hospital, the power company, coroner's office and Public Utilities Commission launched intensive investigations with the aid of engineers and mechanics.

The death-dealing transformer was dismantled and taken to the Benning Power Plant for testing. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald is expected to report today on his findings. He is withholding death certificates pending completion of the probe.

Among those heading the investigation are Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer; C. Melvin Sharpe, vice president of the Potomac Electric Power Co.; J. S. Zebley, chief electrical inspector of the District, and J. H. Ferry, chief engineer of the power company.

Meanwhile, John W. Foxwell, 52, of Mount Rainier, Md., one of those injured in the blast, was reported "slightly improved" at Emergency Hospital. His condition, however, is considered serious.

Late for Radio Talk Peery Thumbs Ride

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., July 1.—Gov. Peery missed making a scheduled radio address here tonight by the proverbial split second after "thumbing" a ride to the university when one of the tires of his car went flat on the Richmond highway.

The Governor was to have made the talk as one of the features of the ninth annual Institute of Public Affairs. A passing motorist gave the chief executive a ride, but he arrived just as Dr. Thomas B. Reed went on the air in his place.

NATIONAL DISTILLERS

has the honor of announcing one of the World's great Gins has become a Citizen of America!

90 PROOF

GILBEY'S GIN

. . . for three generations one of the World's great liquors . . . is now made in America . . . under the control of America's greatest distilling organization . . . with flavorings from the same sources that have served W. & A. Gilbey, Ltd., for 69 years . . . under the eyes of the same family that originated the famous formula in 1867 . . . and priced at the amazing figure of . . . . . $1.34 FIFTH

THERE has never been a day in the past 69 years when the mere mention of Gilbey's Gin failed to kindle a glow of expectancy in the eyes of Englishmen who knew fine liquor.

To them, it was the prince of liquors. A noble beverage to be drunk straight or mixed, as you liked . . . but always with fitting ceremony and due appreciation of its smooth perfection.

For three generations, the name and fame of Gilbey's followed the British flag to the far places of the earth. At the Savoy in London, you might have sipped a Martini of Gilbey's . . . and two months later, beside a safari campfire in Uganda, a jigger of Gilbey's straight.

You might have had a gin-and-tonic on the Terrace at Shepheard's as you watched Cairo's fashionables go by . . . or a John Collins on the cool "deck" of the Bombay Yacht Club . . . a gin buck at the Shanghai Club's "longest" bar . . . or a gin-sling on the big hunters' verandah at Nairobi . . . and always you'd get Gilbey's Gin. For wherever men who loved fine liquors went, Gilbey's went, too.

For a year and a half, National Distillers has delayed including a gin in its family of fine liquors in the hope that one day we might have the privilege of inducing Gilbey's Gin to take out citizenship papers in the United States.

Now . . . that day has come! Now . . . Gilbey's Gin is made in America! And not just an Americanized version of Gilbey's . . . but Gilbey's itself! For just adding another gin to the hundreds already on your retailers' shelves had no temptation for National Distillers. Ever since Repeal there has been a place in America for a gin of imported quality . . . at a domestic price.

So Gilbey's in America had to be a fine gin. And is! Not the slightest detail has been overlooked to insure that smooth and mellow vigor and that rare delicacy of flavoring that have made Gilbey's one of the world's great gins.

The new Gilbey distillery in Cincinnati, in the grain belt, is under the control of America's greatest distilling organization. The juniper berries, coriander seeds, angelica root and all the other flavorings that make Gilbey's a memorable drink, are coming from exactly the same localities in Europe that have supplied W. & A. Gilbey, Ltd., since 1867. And men who watched over the making of Gilbey's in London for nearly 70 years are over here to see that our new "Citizen" lives up to Gilbey's traditions.

Today, we offer you in Gilbey's not "just another gin" but one of the world's great gins. A gin of imported quality . . . but at a domestic gin price! And a gin with an international taste that will open your eyes, we think, to possibilities that you never dreamed lay in a cocktail or a tall, tinkling gin drink. Get a bottle of the new Gilbey's Gin and see what you have been missing.

CHEER was spread among 2,400 emergency employes of the Coast and Geodetic Survey when PWA funds were provided over the week-end to extend the services of these workers at least a month. It was previously reported that the appropriation for this work would expire June 30.

These workers had been employed at the survey under a two-year program of expansion of regular operations with funds allotted by the Public Works Administration. The extension of the funds saved the workers from unemployment.

Due to the fact that the majority of these emergency employes are engineers with high qualifications, some doubt had been expressed whether additional emergency funds would be available for this type of work.

Some emergency relief funds have been allotted to the General Accounting Office also, but the exact number to be taken on has not been definitely decided upon, W. W. Richardson, personal director, stated yesterday.

All hope for getting the leave bills before the House this week has been shattered, according to reports from Capitol Hill. The holding company bill will probably keep Congress busy until recess for July 4. The Supporters of the leave bills are somewhat discouraged over the prospects of getting immediate action. With Administration must bills taking precedent over other measures, it is difficult to predict when the leave bills will be taken up.

Employes' claims for mileage, or transportation expenses in commutation of mileage, will not be allowed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the unauthorized use of personally owned automobiles, according to an announcement from the commissioner's office.

In the past some officers and employes of the bureau and field service have been traveling by their own automobiles without prior authority of the commissioner. Unless specifically stated, it is expected that travel in the future shall be accomplished by the use of the regular means of public transportation.

A circular letter states:

"Authority for the use of personally owned automobiles will not be issued by the bureau unless it can be definitely shown that such method of travel is required and necessary in the interest of the Government."

The New Theater Group, composed mainly of Government employes and managed by Morris Weissberg, Civil Service Commission, will present "Waiting for Lefty," at the National Press Club Auditorium, today at 8:30 p. m. It was given previously at Pierce Hall.

A third branch of Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., formed during the membership drive, has been organized in the mechanics section, Park Service. Officers of this new division are Charles J. Newell, president; John Swagert, first vice president; R. A. Baker, second vice president; R. E. Yinkling, third vice president; E. C. Wolford, secretary; Ralph Gallager, sergeant at arms. The ways and means committee of the unit is composed of James Webb, chairman; C. E. Duncan, sub-chairman; Ralph Talbot, and C. W. Floyd. The sick benefit committee includes Newell, Swagert, Gallager and Baker.

Because of requests of other mechanical groups, the new branch has requested Local No. 2 to extend the mechanics branch to include all mechanics in the departments and offices under the jurisdiction of Local No. 2.

This week will see the formation of a fourth new branch among the special police of the Park Service, organizing under Local No. 2.

Mrs. Ilia Cannon, Identification Division, is confined to her home by illness.

I'm just a plain civilian, so military leave I've none,
And being mighty healthy, sick leave I have to shun.
Leave without pay is all right for those who have the cash,

The doctor, dentist and merchant too, their hours jibe with mine,
Not to mention other chores that gobble up my time.

So when vacation time comes 'round, and I'm ready for a thrill
Of traveling to a distant point, I get to Hyattsville.
So Congress ere your leave begins, which is your well-earned due,
Please give me back my 30 days so I can go home, too.

Sanico Coffee... Iced

a most delicious beverage

Its cooling effects are lasting and it provides just the right degree of mild healthful stimulation to lift you out of the depression of summer temperatures. Sanico's greater body makes it ideal for icing because it holds its flavor through the extreme changes in temperatures necessary in making iced coffee.

Be sure to make Iced Coffee twice as strong as you do for hot coffee; this will allow for dilution caused by melting ice.

Victim of Mad Dog Remains at Large

Maryland health authorities continued their search yesterday for a man known as "Hedges," believed bitten by a rabies-infected dog near Beltsville, Md., last Wednesday.

Apprehension as to the man's safety was expressed by Dr. A. B. Hooton, Prince Georges County health officer, as repeated radio broadcasts failed to reveal the whereabouts of the unsuspecting victim.

The search centered on "Hodges," said to be a huckster trading between Beltsville and Baltimore, after the broadcasts resulted in the finding of T. H. Lynn, of Riverdale, the other of the two men bitten by one of the "mad" dogs.

A total of 13 persons have begun the two-week treatment to prevent infection from the bites or scratches from the hydrophobic dogs. Approximately 20 dogs and cats have also been destroyed in an attempt to relieve the Beltsville area from the menace.

Prince Georges County police yesterday definitely laid 18 robberies to Alexander Marvin Page, the man who photographed himself on one of his "jobs."

Page, killed last Friday by a W., B. & A. train near Huntsville, Md., and identified Sunday by the self-snapped photograph, is also believed to be responsible for scores of other robberies.

Final identification by means of fingerprint comparison was completed yesterday by County Police Sergt. Ralph Brown at the Hyattsville sub-station.

Sergt. Brown said the robberies definitely known to have been committed by Page were in the vicinity of Glenn Dale, Bowie, Ardwick and Landover, Md.

Boy, 7, Found After Search; Stowed Away

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

Will Roy Marsh, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Marsh, of 214 South Payne street, Alexandria, disappeared from his home Sunday night. Yesterday morning, after a night of searching, his parents were notified that their son had been discovered as a stowaway on a Norfolk boat. Officials of the boat could not explain how the boy got aboard. He was discovered hiding in a box about an hour after the boat left Alexandria wharf Sunday night.

He was the guest of the officers during the night and yesterday morning, on arriving at Norfolk, he was turned over to the officials of the company, who notified the Washington office. Alexandria police were notified and they informed his parents of the whereabouts of their son. Yesterday about noon the parents left for Norfolk by automobile.

H. N. Larcombe, Alexandria agent of the boat line, declared yesterday that the boy did not board the boat from the Alexandria wharf, as he was at the wharf from the time the boat landed until it left. The boy left home about an hour before the departure of the boat from Alexandria, and it is believed that he went to Washington, boarding the ship there.

Policeman Charles D. Curtis, who has been a member of the Alexandria police force for the past seven years, yesterday resigned from the force, according to announcement of Capt. John S. Arnold. Curtis stated yesterday that he plans to move to Philadelphia, where he will make his home. He became a member of the Alexandria police force in November, 1928.

Friendship Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Alexandria, has elected the following officers: Councilor, Mrs. M. Robey O'Neil; associate councilor, Mrs. Manda Douglas; vice councilor, William O'Neil; assistant vice councilor, Mrs. Peyton; guide, Miss Catherine Stombach; outside sentinel, Mrs. Amelia Stombach; inside sentinel, Mrs. Annie Pettitt; trustee for 18 months, A. T. Courtney.

Installation of these officers will take place on July 5.

During the past month fines in Alexandria police court showed an increase of more than $1,000 over the preceding month.

Officials attribute this to the fact that the police made a drive against the number game operators who paid their fines promptly after being convicted. The fines ranged from $100 to $250.

Thornton J. Goods, court bailiff, reports the total collected in fines and other sources in the police court during the month of June was $3,443. Of this amount the city will receive $2,827.75. It is divided as follows: Fines, $2,190; State revenue, $85; clerk of the corporation court, $13.75; trial fees, $23.50; warrant fees, $88.57; miscellaneous amounts collected, $194.35.

Ezekel Howard, 50, colored, is being held by Alexandria police on a charge of setting fire to his house at 1112 Queen street. According to the police, the fire occurred early yesterday morning, damaging the house about $400. They claim that an investigation revealed several witnesses who saw Howard start the blaze.

Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Alexandria court, reported yesterday that a total of 126 marriage licenses were issued by his office to June brides. This is the largest number issued by the Alexandria office since June, 1929, when 141 were issued. Last year only 104 were issued during June. Most of the licenses issued last month were to non-residents.

Hoffman also announced yesterday that during the past month he has collected a total of $1,127 for the State from suits, wills, marriage licenses and other State business. Fishing and hunting licenses for the next fiscal year are now on sale.

The Alexandria Shrine Club will hold its first summer outing this evening at Herndon, Va., beginning at 6 o'clock with a dinner party and dance.

Invitations have been issued to all Shriners in northern Virginia to join the club in its outing. Roger C. Sullivan is general chairman and Dr. William Meyer has charge of the arrangements in the town of Herndon. The dinner will be served by the Herndon Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, and during the dance entertainment will be presented.

Would-Be Fisherman Defeats Quiz; Knows All the Answers

Despite Semi-Weekly Baths Prince Georges Takes $1.25 Cheerfully.

Many are the stories of "fisherman's luck," but little has been said about "fisherman's humor."

The latter, however, found expression in an application by a Laurel, Md., resident for a fishing license, received yesterday at the office of Brice Bowie, clerk of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, at Upper Marlboro. The application read:

"Inclosed please find check for $1.25 for which send me fishing license, State-wide.

"I am male, white, 47 years old, 5 feet 9 inches in height, weight 154 pounds (without fisherman's badge), hazel eyes, aquiline nose, French-Dutch descent, teach school, married, have two children (both married), one grandchild (boy), both parents living, two sisters, one brothers (all married), own by own property, registered Democrat, view the New Deal with skepticism, cut my own grass, bathe twice a week (in winter), drive a car (not paid for) and camp out on week-ends (when I can buy enough gas to get there and back)."

Officials Cleared Of Wrongdoing

Richmond, Va., July 1 (AP).—A Hustings Court grand jury late today reported to Judge John Ingram that it found no evidence of violation of criminal laws by either City Sergt. John Saunders or Maj. Charles O. Saville, clerk of Chancery Court, in connection with "shortages" reported in their accounts by State Auditor McCarthy Downs.

The jurors, who had been instructed by the court to confine themselves to an inquiry into any criminal law violation and to ignore accusations of "misfeasance and malfeasance" contained in the auditor's report, did report, however, that they found evidence of careless bookkeeping.

Immediately after the grand jury's report, Judge Ingram announced that he would request Commonwealth's Attorney Gray Haddon tomorrow to prepare a rule ordering Sergt. Saunders to show cause why he should not be removed from office. Downs said he found "shortages" of $10,384.83 in the accounts of the city sergeant and $2,643 in that of the clerk's office. Both amounts have been paid in full.

Pension Expert Soon Will Visit Shore Counties

Lee Dopkin Starts Next Week, With Hope of Unifying System.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 1.—Lee Dopkin, chairman of the pension committee of the Board of State Aids and Charities, said today he is planning to visit Eastern Shore counties next week to assist them in making ready for the mandatory old-age pensions.

He said his committee hopes to create a uniform system throughout the State for administering the pensions. The law requires that county welfare boards be set up.

"It would be confusing for one board to have one set of rules and another an entirely different set," Dopkin said. "We are encouraging a uniform system."

The law has been in effect one month today. The official said he feels "wonderful progress has been made."

Many counties have yet to levy for pensions. This will be done at various times during the year, he said. Allegany County has completed its set-up and now has 120 pensioners on its rolls, the first local unit to put its system into operation.

Department Asks Works Loan for U. of M. Unit.

A petition for $350,000 to complete the Bureau of Mines Building at the University of Maryland was submitted to the Emergency Work Division yesterday by the Department of the Interior.

Plans for the new mining research unit have already been drawn up by Henry Hopkins, Baltimore architect. For this purpose $16,800, appropriated by Congress in 1931, was used.

Approximately 20 acres have been donated by the university for construction of the new building, designed for research in industrial chemistry and geology.

Ricketts Seek Nuisance Writ Upon Rockville

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Alleging that their home has been made untenable because of unhealthful conditions caused by the emptying of the town drainage system on the rear of their property, Theodore A. Ricketts and Edwinna Ricketts yesterday filed suit for injunction against the Mayor and Council of Rockville.

The petition states the plaintiffs can not continue to occupy their home unless this nuisance is abated.

Filed by State Senator Stedman Prescott, the petition declares that the condition can be remedied by inserting a pipe of sufficient capacity to carry the water for 85 feet through the Ricketts property.

The State license bureau has overruled the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board in the application of Mrs. Dessie Beahm, of near Potomac, for a license to sell beer and upheld the local board in the application of George Martin, 9602 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, it was announced yesterday by Ira C. Whitacre, secretary of the local board.

The State board ruled that the complaint that Mrs. Beahm's husband had been convicted of a crime did not hold good since the offense had been committed 12 years ago and the law bars only persons convicted in the past five years.

In the Martin case, the State board ruled that there already are too many licenses granted for Silver Spring, inasmuch as it primarily is a residential area. It stated in the decision that there is no reflection upon the individual petitioner's character intended.

The board also recommended that the county board eliminate some of the existing beer licenses whenever possible.

The Montgomery County Commissioners this afternoon will meet with the State roads commission in an effort to obtain work on county roads this summer in spite of the alleged deficit of State road money due the county.

The commissioners plan to ask that a portion of the gasoline tax money to the county be used for construction and maintenance of roads instead of being devoted in full to paying the deficit. They will point out that thousands of dollars invested in roads in the county are in danger of deterioration.

The country commissioners will meet at Rockville in the morning and at the conclusion of business there will journey to Baltimore.

They are expected to name Oscar Foulk, of Takoma Park, to be manager of the county liquor dispensary system. Foulk, who has been district manager of a chain grocery system, is believed the best qualified Republican available for the position.

Installation of officers and the final meeting of the season of the Takoma Park Lions Club will take place at noon today at Dietle's restaurant in Montgomery Hills.

Dr. E. Clyde Shads, retiring president, will be presented a past president's pin. The officers to be installed are J. Millard Derrick, president; O. W. Youngblood, first vice president; R. L. H. Jones, second vice president; Fabiatt W. Brandt, third vice president; Dr. Edward J. Copping, secretary; H. L. Stevens, lion tamer, and Wilson Dodd, tail twister.

The monthly meeting of the Mayor and Council of Rockville will be held tomorrow night at the firehouse in Rockville.

The Woman's Missionary Society and the Young Woman's Auxiliary of the Rockville Baptist Church will meet jointly tonight in the assembly room of the church. Mrs. T. R. Falvy will be in charge.

A lawn party will be held this evening from 6:30 to 9:30 o'clock at the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, Woodside, under the auspices of the intermediate department.

The annual supper of the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Volunteer Fire Department netted approximately $500. This will be devoted to department needs. Mrs. Henry Griffith, who has been in charge of the suppers for nine years, reported that 700 were served. Ernest Gartner was chairman of the general committee.

The Brookmont Garden Club was entertained at its last meeting by an illustrated lecture on roses by Dr. David Lumsden. The meeting was held at the home of the president, Mrs. William Dawson. Mr. Dawson read a paper entitled "The Well-Groomed Garden in June."

Welfare Director Says He Won't Quit

Butler Involved in Dispute Over Wardenship.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 1.—Spiking reports he would resign as State Director of Welfare, Charles J. Butler said today, "That's news to me."

Asked if he had, or contemplated, tendering his resignation to Gov. Harry W. Nice because of a dispute over the wardenship of the House of Correction, Butler said "not that I know of."

Attaches to the Governor's office also contradicted the report.

Butler has opposed Nice's plan to replace Dr. Leroy Wright as warden of the House of Correction by Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt of Annapolis and has refused to bring the matter before the Board of Welfare.

Western Indian Had Civilization Like the Incas

Village in Oklahoma Gives Signs of Highly Developed Life.

Beaver, Okla. (U.P.).—A civilization like that of the Incas once flourished among Indians in this erstwhile section of the Nation's "dust bowl."

Discovery of a prehistoric village near Turpin in the northwest part of Beaver County by Dr. J. B. Thoburn, well-known State archaeologist, indicates that this civilization of an unknown age was highly developed.

Dr. Thoburn began excavation recently in a partially buried rock wall that farmers thought was an abandoned sheep corral.

The wall, inclosing an area approximately 85 by 100 feet, is of crude construction, but still intact after ages of wind, rain and dust. It was once the Administration Building of a highly civilized tribe, Dr. Thoburn said.

Many crude and primitive implements for farming and household work have been unearthed in the excavation. Bone awls, needles, shuttles, stone drills and arrowheads of unique design show the unusual manual aptitude of the vanished race.

Art thrived with labor. Fragments of pottery of beautiful design are being discovered daily. These discoveries are in sufficient quantity to make possible the restoration of a few vessels.

Agriculture was the basis of community economy then as it is now. Irrigation projects near the village are still in evidence along the banks of Beaver Creek. They were no doubt utilized by the tribe in its efforts at farming.

Dr. Thoburn said that no remains of deceased natives have been discovered because the tribe moved the bodies of its dead when it migrated.

Nor has there been found any evidence of religion in the tribe, although the habit of moving the dead would seem to indicate the Indians were "ancestor worshipers."

In all probability, Dr. Thoburn said, when the Indians were forced to abandon their abode by the influx of a superior race, they buried much of their art and belongings. He predicts that within the near future, some cave containing these treasures will be discovered.

This discovery, he said, will be "the most valuable find made within the State."

He expects to furnish several museums with material from his excavation.

$800,000 Aid Appropriation Goes to Virginia

Final Rules for Spending $7,500,000 on Roads Are Due Today.

By the Associated Press.

As the Federal emergency relief administration authorized another $800,000 for general relief in Virginia, spokesmen for the PWA yesterday threw little light on the Virginia question of whether it would be more economical for the State to use its own funds on State public works projects or seek a 45 per cent PWA grant.

Meanwhile at the office of the chief of the bureau of public roads it was said that final regulations governing the expenditure of $7,500,000 in Federal funds on Virginia roads probably would be approved today.

Announcement that a Virginia allotment of $800,000 for general relief in July had been approved was made at the office of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. It was explained that this sum did not include money for rural rehabilitation or any other special relief projects.

Economy Question.

It was alloted under the passing emergency relief, and was not authorized as works progress money. Beginning now, the ERA funds will begin to diminish, as the relief rolls are absorbed by the new works program.

Spokesmen for the PWA who had before them newspaper clippings saying Virginia was making a study to determine whether it would not be more economical for the State to put up its own funds for State public works—despite the 45 per cent outright grant offered by PWA for compliance with Federal regulations—said as far as they knew the regulations were complete with the exception of possible supplemental rules on wage-scale matters. At present wages are left more or less to be governed by those prevailing in the respective localities.

Workers' Ineptitude.

The PWA said one thing the State has to keep in mind is that the principal object of the new works program is to take persons off relief rolls and put them to work. For this reason, it was said, it was certain that the regulation requiring 90 per cent of persons employed on PWA projects to come from relief rolls would be enforced rigidly.

The Virginia officials were reported as doubting whether this qualification could be met.

Some reports have been received here agreeing with the report that both Gov. Peery and Director of the Virginia Budget C. H. Bradford found the ineptitude of relief workers had caused some contractors to demand extra money to offset carelessness and delay.

This was one of the principal difficulties complained of by the State highway department, which has before the Bureau of Public Roads a proposal suggested as an alternative, circumscribing some of the difficulties the State has found. The regulations due today are expected to contain the Federal Government's answer.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 1.—Slot machines found operating after midnight tonight will be confiscated, according to Roy O. Ross, chief of police, as the city council refused to issue licenses for their operation the new fiscal year.

Historical Sites Marking Urged As Relief Work

West Virginia Would Use Federal Funds For Research Also.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 1.—Employment of several hundred workers, representing every county in the State, to complete the work of assembling and preserving historical data of West Virginia, and of adequately marking the State's historic and scenic landmarks has been proposed for extension and continuation under the new Federal Works Progress Administration.

The project meets with the approval of the governor's commission on historic and scenic markers, which has been engaged in the work in cooperation with the State Road Commission. The State Relief Administration also indorses the movement for an extension.

It is proposed to bring up to date as far as possible the war records of soldiers in the Revolution, War of 1812, Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish-American War and the World War. The cooperation of the American Legion will be sought.

The revised project is to include, in the historic research, subjects that have not been previously covered, such as rolls of old churches, cemetery records and vital statistics up to 1900.

It has been tentatively agreed by the State Road Commission to erect at least 500 historical and scenic markers, which, together with the labor in assembling historic data, will cost approximately $80,000.

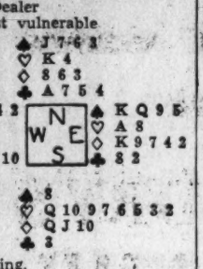
Hurdling the Pre-emptive.

Many methods have been devised for reaching games and slams after an opponent has made a pre-emptive bid. These methods—the forcing no-trump overcall and the cooperative double particularly—are very effective. Nevertheless there can be no question that an opening bid of four seriously hampers the other side in its bidding. The four-bid cuts off two or three valuable rounds of bidding in which information could be exchanged by the partners who hold most of the high cards.

Effective.

The most effective pre-emptive bid is made on a hand of freak distribution but conspicuous shortage of honor-tricks. To a pre-emptive bid probably can be credited the excellent result obtained by North and South in the deal below.

South, Dealer
East-West vulnerable



The bidding.

South	West	North	East
4♡	5♣	Pass	Pass

South's bid of four hearts is sound, though he holds neither an Ace nor a King. Almost invariably a hand such as South's will take seven tricks by itself, as the maximum possible set is 500 points and with any assistance from North, a one or two-trick set may be the maximum.

West was in a difficult situation after the four-heart bid. He did not wish to bid four notrump because he was not prepared for a response of five diamonds. The five-club bid was his only alternative and, as a matter of fact, that was a very dangerous bid considering West's vulnerability. Had North, for example, held East's cards, West could have been defeated 800 points.

It would not have been unsound for East to raise West's five-club bid to six, largely because he had no support for the club suit. The principal reason for the success of pre-emptive bids lies in creating just such uncertainty in the minds of opponents. Had South not made his pre-emptive opening bid, East and West probably would have reached a small slam on the following bidding.

West	East
1♠	3♠
4♣	4♠
4NT	5♡
6♣

Once West had been able to open the bidding and East to respond, no overcall by South could have prevented their bidding correctly. Over one diamond South would bid four hearts. West could now bid four spades because having shown his club suit, he would not be giving false information as to the spade strength.

Duce Spurns Offer by Britain To Cede Land to Abyssinians

By the United Press.

London, July 1.—Premier Benito Mussolini rejected Great Britain's offer to cede part of her African territory to Abyssinia to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia, Capt. Anthony Eden, secretary for League of Nations affairs, announced in the House of Commons today.

His announcement of unprecedented willingness of an empire whose motto is: "What we have, we hold," to part with colonial possessions created a sensation in Parliament.

Members demanded that Commons be consulted before any British territory is given away, causing Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, to say that since Il Duce rejected London's offer it had been withdrawn.

Duce Determined.

Mussolini, members gathered, was determined to proceed with armed conquest of the land ruled by the Kings of Ethiopia since Solomon's herds grazed on the plains.

Eden said the British offer was tentative and intended to facilitate "such territorial and economic concessions by Abyssinia to Italy as might be involved in a settlement.

"I much regret this suggestion did not commend itself to Premier Mussolini, who was unable to accept it as a basis for solution of the dispute.

"The British government could not remain indifferent to events which might profoundly affect the future of the League of Nations. Public opinion in this country feels most strongly on this issue."

Eden revealed that in Rome he suggested to Mussolini that Britain cede to Abyssinia "a strip of territory in British Somaliland giving Abyssinia access to the sea."

In return, Eden disclosed, Britain asked no concession of Abyssinia except grazing rights for tribes in territory which might be ceded to Italy.

"Our suggestion was not lightly made," Eden told the Commons. "Only the gravity of the situation could justify the cession of British territory without an equivalent return."

Obligation to League.

Joining in the discussion Sir Samuel stressed the gravity with which London views the Italo-Abyssinian situation.

"The government regards the issues at stake as most urgent," Hoare said. "They are under our special and constant consideration."

Describing the abortive British attempt to mediate between Italy and Abyssinia Eden said:

"Our methods were neither egoistic nor dictated by our interests in Africa, but rather by our membership in the League of Nations."

Lord Cecil described Ethiopia as a weak member of the League of Nations, ready to accept arbitration, while Italy continued to mass troops on the Abyssinian frontier.

"If the members of the league fail to fulfill their obligations the blow to collective security will be such it is doubtful whether the league will recover," Lord Cecil said. "Our country must carry out fully its obligations under the league covenant."

Dickinson Died Battling Thief In Holdup Plot

was no attempt to connect them directly with the murder. Schweitzer said that when the girls left the machine, he turned around to the rear seat where Dickinson was sitting, whipped out the revolver and fired point blank at the attorney.

This latest break in the mysterious case involving a lawyer of impeccable social and professional connections with a man of the underworld and the three women came with dramatic suddenness.

Schweitzer, arrested last Saturday with the women in Fort Wayne, Ind., whence he had fled when he felt it was "too hot" for them in Chicago, had told three widely divergent stories. He intimated suicide, then told how the gun was fired in a battle over its possession and finally he indicated that he had shot in self-defense.

Prisoner Grows Surly.

He was surly, unresponsive, and wholly unconcerned over the absurdities of his three "confessions." Then today, he appeared nervous, downcast when he appeared in court on a habeas corpus hearing which was adjourned until Wednesday.

Prosecutor McCrea brought in the three women, whose previous stories that Dickinson had been murdered while they were away from the car appeared "truthful," and urged them to tell their stories again. Jean Miller appeared near the breaking point.

She was ushered in alone and was said to have confessed to the true story, implicating her companions.

It was apparent the girl's story had been changed radically. Within a few minutes Schweitzer, far from the dapper suspect taken in Fort Wayne, was ushered into McCrea's office. He was handcuffed.

Miss Miller, meanwhile, had been led away, screaming. Hysterical, she fainted in the elevator, striking her head on its wall.

An attache of the prosecutor's office left the conference room to report that Schweitzer was "breaking." An hour later McCrea himself announced that Schweitzer had confessed.

One of Women Denies Schweitzer's Story

By the United Press.

Detroit, June 30.—One of the women today denied Schweitzer's story that Howard Carter Dickinson was shot in front of the women and claimed the two men were alone in Rouge Park. She said the women returned to see Dickinson sprawled on the ground beside the car.

The woman arrested under the name of Lillian Winter, who later identified herself as "Jean Miller," said the three women had left the car and walked back from the road. Hearing a shot they ran back and found Dickinson dead. She claimed Schweitzer threatened all three if they did not stay with him. He told them they were as much involved as he. They listened and rode to Chicago with him. Separating, they met again at Fort Wayne Friday night and were arrested Saturday.

Murder Car Found In Chicago Garage

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 1.—The automobile in which Howard aCrter Dickinson met death was found in a South Side garage today by State's attorieys police. There were two bullet holes in its top and one in the blood-stained rear seat. No weapon was found, authorities said.

Mrs. Anna Wood told of renting an apartment to William Schweitzer while he and three young women were "hiding out."

She described her four tenants, who occuped her two-room kitchenette apartment, as "very quiet."

"They read the newspapers a lot," she said. "They paid a week's rent in advance, but left early Saturday without telling me. I saw lights burning in the apartment and found the place all upset."

The apartment house, on the South Side, was a short distance from the garage where the death car was found.

Mrs. Wood said Schweitzer introduced one of the young women as his wife and she was led to believe the other two were sisters of the "wife."

Garage attendants said Schweitzer drove the car into the garage Friday night, asked for an estimate on repairs and drove away. He returned Saturday morning and left the machine.

you that the Soviet government can not allow the sailing of Japanese-Manchurian ships on the internal waters of the U. S. S. R. and if, despite all warnings, Japanese-Manchurian ships enter Soviet waters responsibility for the consequences must be borne by the Japanese-Manchurian authorities."

The protest makes it clear the Moscow government wants an answer from Tokyo.

"The Soviet government expects Japan to declare her intention of maintaining peaceful relations on the border and to take prompt and energetic measures to prevent provocative action," Yurenev informed the Tokyo foreign office.

Holding Japanese-Manchurian authorities already responsible for acts of provocation, Yurenev asked the Japanese government to point out to them the "impermissibility and danger of the conduct they have adopted on the border."

Hugh Johnson Hires Ex-Aids In N. Y. Relief

Staff of Former Holders of Federal Posts to Help General on Job.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson moved in today to take command of New York City relief administration, surrounded by a staff of former and present Government employes whom the general knew in Washington.

The general's son, Lieut. Kilbourne Johnston, and his secretary, Miss Frances M. Robinson, were included in what the general called his "trouble shooters."

Other appointees announced by Johnson included Alvin Brown, former assistant director of the budget and former NRA administrative officer, who will be in charge of all administration; Edward F. McGrady, assistant Secretary of Labor, who will organize the labor bureau, and Maj. Joseph C. Mehaffey, of the War Department, who will head the works and projects administrations.

The general, declaring that his and his appointees' jobs are to "oversee rather than do," said that there is no reason why his administration should "become mechanical, hard-boiled, high-hat, or dumb, and I promise that it won't."

Commenting on the Government employe complexion of his staff, Johnson said:

"This was done for two reasons. First, these are exclusively Federal funds. Second * * * it seemed necessary to select assistants who have no local affiliations or loyalties."

On the question of whether the forthcoming administration will be similar to that of his former job as head of the NRA, the general said pointedly:

"We have no responsibility for or authority over wage rates and hours in our own department. That comes from Washington. Also there will be some lapses, delays and trouble at the start due to change in organization and Federal policy."

May Yohe, Glamorous Figure Of Gay Nineties, Near Death

Once Owner of Hope Diamond, She Was Friend of King Edward VII and Lost Titled Husband When She Eloped With Capt. Bradlee Strong.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 1.—Once the wearer of the supposedly sinister Hope diamond, May Yohe, toast of the gay night life of New York and London in the "Gay Nineties," was near death tonight in a Boston hospital.

Surgeons feared a brain injury caused by a fall would cost her her life.

The 66-year-old former actress, whose rendition of "Honey, Ma Honey" caused a furore and whose vivid personality brought her the friendship of King Edward VII when he was Prince of Wales, knew all the ill luck associated by some with the Hope diamond.

Born in humble surroundings in Bethlehem, Pa., her dynamic personality won her a star's place on the stage and made "The Arabian Nights" and "The Crystal Slipper" the hit shows of their seasons.

After her marriage in 1894 to Lord Francis Hope, the possessor of the famous stone, she wore the Hope diamond twice.

But of that great blue stone she said "it looked like a bum sapphire. Why, I gave the old stone more publicity than it ever had before or since."

Her marriage to Lord Hope ended in divorce in 1902 after she had eloped with Capt. Bradlee Strong, son of a former mayor of New York. Her marriage to Capt. Strong ended the same way.

But in 1914, when all London was "abuzz" over a possible reconciliation between her and Lord Hope, she married Capt. John Smuts, a nephew of the Boer War general and himself a veteran of that war.

Capt. Smuts, who served in the World War too, was wounded. He became ill. The once titled lady became a janitress. Then a ranching venture in California failed. Fire ruined a tearoom business in New Hampshire.

But later years brought her and Capt. Smuts financial independence and they have lived modestly in a Boston suburb—the once "toast of the town" a housewife.

The present owner of the Hope diamond is Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean. The last striking public appearance of the famous jewel was on the occasion of Mrs. McLean's return from Soviet Russia in the fall of 1934, when she wore it around her neck while leaving the ship.

While in Russia, she said at that time, she had worn the diamond and her other jewelry against the advice of Soviet police, and she remarked that she considered herself "the only person in ten years who has given poor, dismal Russia a thrill."

Sales Tax Law Cuts New Teeth In Six States

Illinois Is Expecting to Raise $78,000,000 to Aid Needy.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—The sales tax, lusty infant of the revenue makers cut new teeth today to bite into the consumers' dollar.

Six States—Illinois, Arkansas, New Jersey, California, North Carolina and South Dakota—began collecting new or higher levies. In two others laws which had expired took on a new lease of life.

All had hopes of raising millions of dollars, $78,000,000 in Illinois alone, where the rate was raised from 2 per cent to 3 per cent on the sale price of retail trade.

Along with the 3 per cent rate in Illinois, designed principally to meet Federal authorities' demands that the State share the cost of aiding its unemployed, came prospect that the frequently mentioned, but never seen monetary unit, the mill, would take corporeal status. The State planned to issue aluminum tokens of 1.5 mills to facilitate collection of the tax.

The arrival of a 2 per cent levy in Arkansas found a group of merchants in rebellion against it. They refused to mark the tax in their sales prices and pledged they would neither collect it from their customers nor pay it to the State from their own pockets.

In California, a new rate of 3 per cent replaced the former 2½ per cent levy along with new liquor levies and increased inheritance taxes.

New Jersey imposed a new 2 per cent tax to last three years; North Carolina's new levy bore a 3 per cent rate and exempted only fresh liquid milk; South Dakota inaugurated a 2 per cent tax on sale of tangible personal property along with a similar rate on the communication business of utilities.

The American Legislators Association here said that some form of sales, gross income or high license tax, which in effect constituted a sales levy, were now in use in 29 of the 48 States. It added that the tax is only about four years old as a State impost in this country.

Landon Completes Blast on Economy

1936 Possibility Shows How Kansas Cut Costs.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, July 1.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, a budget balancer who, friends believe, is White House bound, completed tonight a speech of which much may be heard before Republicans pick a presidential candidate in 1936.

Gov. Landon will tell the Nation tomorrow how government costs were slashed in Kansas while soaring in many other States.

He flatly denied tonight that the speech has any "special significance." He reiterated he is taking no part in the "Landon-for-President" boom in Kansas and Missouri.

But observers smiled.

"It can not help but have great political significance," said one at Topeka, Kansas, capital, who asked that his name be withheld.

"If Landon should become a presidential candidate, economy in government would naturally be his platform. The speech will attract attention at this time—particularly in view of the declaration at the recent party conference in Springfield, Ill., calling for a balanced national budget."

Sixth Defendant Convicted of Manslaughter.

By the United Press.

A sixth defendant was found guilty of manslaughter.

The verdict freeing the defendants, including two sons of Joseph Bruno, who already has been twice convicted, was returned by the jury of three women and nine men after 70 hours of deliberation.

Those acquitted were Arthur Bruno, James and Alfred Bruno, sons of Joseph; Paul Bruno, his nephew, and Anthony Orlando, another nephew.

Philip Bruno, brother of Joseph, was found guilty on four counts of manslaughter.

Bruno was first convicted of manslaughter and in a second trial he was found guilty of second-degree murder. Appeals in both cases are pending.

Miss Grace Roper Wed To Doctor Bohn of N. Y.

Secretary's Daughter and Husband to Make Their Home in Washington After Several Months' Travel in Europe.

After a several months' wedding trip to Austria, Germany and Italy, Dr. and Mrs. Francis Bohn, whose marriage yesterday was one of the interesting nuptial events of the summer, will return to Washington to make their home, and not in New York as previously was planned. The marriage of Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, to Dr. Francis Bohn was performed yesterday afternoon in the gardens of the Roper home, Sunnyside, by the Rev. Harry Everett, of Mountain Lakes and Jersey City, N. J., an old friend of the bridegroom.

Clusters of white garden flowers decorated the improvised prieu dieu arranged before a clump of dogwood in the garden where the ceremony, witnessed only by members of the immediate families, Cabinet members and a few tlose friends, took place. Unattended, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an exquisite model of ice blue lace, fashioned on simple lines with a slight train. There was a loose knot of pale pink velvet ribbon on the square cut neckline and the sleeves were full and elbow length. With her dress she wore a wide picture hat of pink horsehair trimmed with a bow of pink velvet. Her bridal bouquet was of blue delphinium and pink roses. Ushers at the wedding were the bride's brothers, Mr. Richard Frederick Roper and Lieut. Harry McKay Roper.

During the ceremony and at the reception which followed, a program of string music was presented under the direction of Mr. Sidney Seidenman. Assisting Dr. and Mrs. Bohn in receiving their guests was Mrs. Roper, who wore a gown of peach lace with a wide black hat and a shoulder corsage of orchids. Assisting in the general entertaining were the bride's sister, Mrs. David R. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C., and her sisters-in-law, Mrs. Harry McKay Roper and Mrs. R. Frederick Roper.

Mrs. Coker wore a frock of pink lace with a hat of white and a corsage of orchids and Mrs. Harry Roper was frocked in a model of orchid chiffon with a white hat and similar corsage. Mrs. Frederick Roper wore a model of jade green with a white and matching green hat. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Coker's three young daughters, Martha, Mary and Caroline Coker. They wore frocks of net, fashioned with long full skirts and fitted bodices, and with them wide picture hats. Martha was frocked in yellow, Mary in peach and little Caroline in blue net.

Dr. and Mrs. Bohn left for New York imediately after the ceremony and tomorrow will sail on the S. S. Washington for Europe. Mrs. Bohn's traveling ensemble was a smart, tailored model of sheer navy crepe with gray fox trimming, with which she wore a gray hat and accessories of the same shade.

The bride, who is a popular member of Capital society, was graduated in 1917 from Vassar College, and last year received her master's degree in economics and international relations from the American University. She is a specialist in Canadian and British Empire tariff and trade relations and for several years has been associated with the international relations division of the United States Tariff Commission. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Roper, of Marlboro County, S. C., and the late Mr. and Mrs. William N. McKenzie, of Gibson, N. C.

Dr. Bohn, who has resided in New York for several years, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Charles Bohn, of Cuyahoga County, Ohio. He is a graduate of the Baldwin-Wallace College and the University of Michigan, and was for several years a special correspondent in Germany and other European countries for the New York Evening Post.

Tiny Razors Are Cute and Practicable

Sun Clips Are Available to Use Ove Lens of Regular Glasses.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN GULLIVER awoke in the land of Lilliputia and discovered the tiny people and their half-pint commodities he must have felt a little as you'll feel when you see the midget razors in a downtown store.

Even midget fails to describe them. They're so small they'd be lost in your vest pocket. And yet, despite their size, they're sturdily made, and probably the most useful women's accessory to appear in the novelty ranks this season.

When the razor is taken apart, the guards, blade and handle all fit into a little case not much larger than the average razor blade.

This you can put in your pocketbook, keep in your swimming bag, and carry with you wherever you go. And don't think the size detracts from the usefulness, no sir! The surgical steel blade is sharp and dependable. The handle is just right for a ready grip. The whole little gadget is just practicality plus!

Sun Clips for Glasses.

Those who plan to spend a lot of time in the sun, gardening, golfing or "beaching," should protect their eyes from the blinding glare with dark glasses. Loads and loads of women who wear glasses all the time find it inconvenient to discard these for dark ones. They are especially provided for, however, in a downtown store where "sun clips" are being featured.

These clips, which fit over ordinary glasses, come in several shades, smoke, blue, and green. They cost only 50 cents.

Cooling Talcum Powder.

As cool as snow and as soft as down is a certain talcum powder which takes the laurels for being a grand little summer comfort. Just try it! Sprinkle a bit over your arms and shoulders, literally deluge your back with it. Spread it liberally over your legs and feet. By this time you feel as though you'd taken your sun bath on an iceberg!

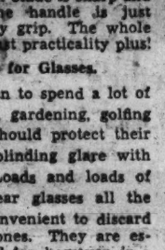
Here's a tale that's ideal for use after a long, hard day of sun burning. It's ideal for men to use after shaving. It's a godsend to those who suffer from chafing and prickly heat.

You will find it in the toilet goods department of a downtown store, where a large tin costs—believe it or not—only one dime!

Slippers With Arch Supports.

Here's something that hundreds of women have been hunting, but hitherto were unable to find—comfortable boudoir slippers with arch support.

You know when you've been on your feet all day, and you come home all tired out, bedroom slippers are terrifically important for your rest and relaxation. That is, they should be. But often they let you down by straining the tired nerves and muscles in your feet. These new arch-supporter slippers, however, are proof against that. They bring you real foot freedom and help revive your leaden spirits.



They are so practical you'd hardly expect them to be pretty. That's why these surprise you. Just see them! They come in blue and black kid with crepe linings and small Cuban heels.

Light Traveling Bags.

Vacationists who ponder the problem of "traveling light" must, after they've settled the wardrobe question, consider the luggage angle. Why encumber oneself now with hat boxes and suitcases which tip the scales like heavyweight champions? Why not take advantage of the airweight luggage featured in a downtown store?

Some extremely attractive pieces found yesterday are covered over with glazed tweed to give them that casual, well-to-do sportiness. They come in several sizes, ranging from week-end bags to large suitcases. Dull finish silk linings, nickel or brass locks, give them a perfect finish. You may buy them in either gray or tan tones for very, very little.

Baked Beans With Sherry Wine Answer Problem of Tasty Dish for July 4 Picnics

Careful Wrapping of Casserole Not Only Bakes the Vegetables but Keeps Them Hot; Tips Given on Avoiding Leftovers.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ALL questions seem to be tuned to the same idea—what shall we have to eat for the Fourth of July picnic? The answer is quite simple. It all depends upon how the lazy atmosphere of a sunny July day affects your appetite. You will know from past experience whether you will want cold or hot food or a little of both. But if guests have been invited and you are packing the lunch, you had better plan to have at least one warm dish and a hot beverage, lest your guest be tempted to scurry back to town in quest of a hot meal.

If all of your hot dishes for picnic lunches have been unsatisfactory and you want to be sure of a winner this time, try baked beans with sherry wine. You can rest assured that none of their sweet, warm fragrance will be lost on the hot summer air. There is no secret to keeping them hot. Bake them in a covered casserole and time them so they will be ready to emerge from the oven just as the last bit of food is being tucked into the picnic basket. Be sure that the casserole cover is clamped on tight and then start bundling up the casserole in thick layers of newspaper. When you arrive at your destination several hours later the beans will be as you want them, hotter than hot. Bake the beans this way:

Baked Beans With Sherry Wine.

1 pint pea beans
½ pound raw smoked ham
2 tablespoons molasses
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup sherry wine

Wash beans and cover with cold water. Do not soak beans. Place over fire and bring slowly to a boil, then set the kettle where the beans will simmer, but at no time boil vigorously. When they have cooked in this way for 15 minutes drain and add fresh boiling water. Add raw smoked ham cut in two-inch strips and simmer until the beans can be pierced with a straw. Turn the beans into a colander to drain. Put beans in casserole.

Mix salt, molasses and mustard in a cup and fill with hot water. Pour over the ham and beans. Add enough water to cover the beans and bake in a slow oven (250-350 degrees F) 6 to 8 hours, adding water to keep them covered until the last hour of baking. Then add the sherry wine and keep the casserole uncovered during the last hour of baking. This amount will serve six.

If you are carrying hot coffee, a thermos bottle will be indispensable, but don't go to the expense of buying several thermos jugs if you are taking cold beverages, too. Use your largest bucket filled with ice as a cooler for all the cold drinks. Place the bottles of beer, screw cap jaws of lemonade or iced tea and bottles of milk around the ice and cover the top and sides of the pail with an old piece of rug or a heavy burlap bag.

Don't Pack Too Much.

The greatest problem in packing a picnic lunch is to know just how much of each food to carry. We know that eating out-of-doors is bound to increase our appetites, and so we usually pack too much food, which is sheer extravagance because there is nothing so hopeless as a picnic leftover. The following calculations should prove helpful to the woman who wants to be practical about the amount she prepares.

One quart of salad will serve six persons.

One 4-pound chicken will yield about three cups diced meat.

One-half pound coffee and four quarts of boiling water will make enough of the beverage to serve 16 persons.

One and one-half dozen lemons will make enough lemonade to serve 20 to 25 persons, depending largely on the size and juiciness of the fruit.

One pound of cold boiled ham will serve six to eight persons and 1 pound of meat loaf will provide for the same number.

Two-thirds cup creamed butter will spread both sides of 24 sandwiches. One pint of sandwich filling will fill 24 sandwiches.

Overexposure to Sun Imperils Health and Beauty, Cutter Says

Excess Ray Absorption Produces Illness and May Cause Skin Wrinkles, He Adds; Tan Should Come Gradually.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MORE of us will be out of doors at least a part of the time for the next three or four months. Long before this we have discarded our heavy clothing and have lessened in a sense the protection afforded the skin by layers of this and that. Exposure of the skin to sunlight will be greater and the surface of the body will come in contact with many forms of plant and insect life. Skin irritations will ensue, the most common of which is sunburn. On numerous occasions we have cautioned against overexposure to direct sunlight. Few of us realize that the ultraviolet rays that reach our bodies through a fairly clear atmosphere are capable of producing powerful chemical effects and may bring about violent reactions in the skin.

An hour or two after exposure there is often an intense reddening followed by the formation of blisters. If the area involved is extensive, general systemic symptoms such as headache, nausea, vomiting and sometimes abdominal cramps may result. The temperature may be 100 degrees F. or higher. Several days are often required for recovery, during which time the skin peels and new layers form. If only a part of the body, such as the face, the neck, and the hands is affected, general symptoms may be lacking.

The way to secure a tan—and and tanning is not always as desirable as is popularly supposed—is to expose the body at first for but a short time, gradually increasing the period on each succeeding sunny day. At the outset one should permit the sun's says to strike the entire body for only 1 minute or even less. This period may be increased one-half minute per day for the first week and 2 to 3 minutes per day for the second week, so that by the end of two weeks' sun to the entire body may be safely continued for approximately 20 minutes.

Perfumes and toilet water should not be used on the skin prior to taking a sun bath. The essential oils in these substances may cause a slight irritation and increase the effect of the ultra-violet rays. A mottle dappearance sometimes results.

Repeated damage to the skin from the sun is known to bring on degenerative changes that may become permanent. Those who would avoid facial wrinkles will do well to tan the face very slowly. As a result of rapid tanning the skin becomes old looking and dry, and the outer layers will show many tiny, threadlike wrinkles.

After exposure it is well to massage the body with sterile cocoanut oil, cocoanut-butter, or some absorbable cream that contains from 2 to 5 per cent of bismuth subcarbonate. In actual sunburn attended with pain and soreness the application of mineral oil will promote healing. In severe cases a spray of 5 per cent tannic acid is recommended.

Which Should Be First Consideration When Girl Marries, Love or Economic and Social Security?; This Question Confronts 24-Year-Old Girl.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a dear friend, a girl of 24, who finds herself involved in an unhappy love problem and who has asked me to help her reach a wise decision. Because I have watched the development of the situation from the beginning, I feel so close to the problem I can't see the forest for the trees. I am very fond of three of the four persons involved. So with her consent, I have decided to write to you for your opinion.

• • • •

Two years ago she met an irresistibly charming young man. Every one who knows him admits his charm. He has a good job, comes of a good family, but his weakness is drink. They were attracted to each other from the first, but for a time he avoided her. Then one evening he told her he loved her, but didn't feel worthy of her. He also told her he had been engaged to be married once before, but his girl had thrown him over because he failed to stop drinking. He said until he met this girl he had never expected to fall in love again. Anyway, they became tentatively engaged, you might say. He continued to drink a little, but was always the soul of devotion to her.

• • • •

Then, two things happened. The girl he had been engaged to came to town, and the other girl (my friend) met a man at a party who fell in love with her at first sight. He made so little impression on her that she didn't even recall his name when he first called her for a date. He doesn't have the winning personality the other man has, but he is everything that is substantial and fine in a man. He is well-to-do, dependable, doesn't drink, and is 10 years older than she. Accepting the fact that she has conditionally promised to marry another man, he has courted her assiduously, and insists she should marry him if she wishes to be happy. He says she will learn to love him, because he will always be the soul of kindness to her. He is willing to marry her on the basis of affection, which she has come to feel for him.

• • • •

When the other girl came to town, the first man began seeing her again. He told my friend that he discovered the girl he had been engaged to still has the same old attraction for him, but that strangely enough it doesn't change the love he feels for her. He said if he were married to her (my friend) he could forget the other girl, but as it is, he is torn between the two of them.

• • • •

Now, this is the situation: My friend says there is no doubt she is really in love with the first man, but fears she would be unhappy if she married him, unless he gave up drinking, which isn't likely. She is very fond of the other man, but despite his arguments and persuasions, isn't sure she could ever be happily married to him, feeling as she does about the first man. Both are urging her to make a decision. In the meantime, the one man is continuing to divide his attention between the two girls; and the other is paying the most devoted attention to my friend. What should she do?

CONFIDANTE.

Love Not Enough.

DEAR CONFIDANTE: It seems obvious to me your friend should abandon all thought of marrying the "irresistibly charming young man" whose "weakness is drink." Whether she marries the other man: ". . . dependable, well-to-do . . . everything that is substantial and fine . . ." is for her to decide after mature consideration.

It is quite definitely within the realm of human possibility for her to make a successful and happy marriage with the second man, providing she will invest herself entirely in the partnership; if she can embrace the psychologists' definition of love, which is that it is "no more than a special form of social feeling, the communal consciousness on which all human relations are based"; that it is "the result of years of co-operation, of mutual enjoyment and mutual suffering"; that it is "the happy reward of a correctly and normally lived life a deux," and not simply the premise for a legalized sexual union.

• • • •

"Men and women would be far happier if they planned their marital relationships according to the deep compatabilities of social and intellectual and occupational interests, responsibilities toward children and State, mutual helpfulness and acted 'as if' love might be the reward of 5 or 10 years of successful co-operation," writes Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, director of the Community Church Mental Hygiene Clinic, of New York City, in his book, "How to Be Happy Though Human."

• • • •

"A great many marriages," he holds, "would turn out more happily if the contracting parties gave less thought to love and more to the matter of financial budgets, the pedagogic principles according to which the children were to be educated, the mutual use of leisure, the past performance in social cooperation, the willingness of each to share responsibility and the like."

• • • •

"Marriage and love affairs," writes Dr. Wolfe, "will continue to be unhappy until we remove the fallacies of the omnipotence of romantic passion from the thought vocabulary of our children and until we institute objective training in the art of love and teach men and women that they must be responsible for their emotions • • • just as they are responsible for curbing other anti-social tendencies in their behavior."

• • • •

It seems to me, therefore, that your friend should think twice before rejecting her second suitor simply because she has become romantically yet unsubstantially engrossed elsewhere. M. H.

Use This Pattern for Sewing A Winter Supply of Panties

Pattern No. 633.

A PRETTY PAIR of panties like one of these, is convenient, easily-carried-about summer sewing. It is surprising how much can be accomplished in the long daylight hours if one has something cut out and ready.

This pattern is very easy to use. The seams may be sewed by machine and the hand work done only in putting on the lace. Or the whole thing may be sewed by hand. The version without lace is practical for everyday wear—the others for best. Why not plan to make a winter's supply during the summer months? Both designs fit beautifully and are accurately sized. Cut in waist sizes 27 to 36. For size 30, the straight panties require 1¼ yards of 39 inch material and ⅝ yard of 35 inch lace, if desired.

McGaffey's Molded Men, Their Ace Collector Says

That's Why Miss Maude Blair Began to Acquire 700 Priceless Texts.

Harris & Ewing.

MISS MAUDE BLAIR, textbook authority, is the world's premier collector of McGuffey readers.

IN OUR GRANDMOTHER'S day there was at least one of them in every home. Usually there were six. Today they are all collector's items. No, the reference is not to feather beds, asafetida bags or antimacassars. It is to McGuffey readers, those famous old textbooks which formed such a considerable part of the education of most young Americans during the last century.

Like many mementoes of an age near and yet remote, their discovery on dusty bookshelves or in attic trunks is becoming less and less frequent. The largest collection of them is owned by Miss Maude Blair, of Detroit, a recent Washington visitor.

Miss Blair has combined her profession as director of the free textbook and library department of the Detroit Board of Education with her hobby of collecting McGuffey readers. She talks entertainingly of her profession—she has the responsibility of keeping track of 2,500,000 books—but when she begins to discuss her hobby her eyes sparkle and shine. The Little Red Schoolhouse, and that whole storied period of American childhood it represents, seems real and near.

Began Collection 8 Years Ago.

"I first began collecting McGuffey readers about eight years ago," Miss Blair related. "Handling textbooks constantly, it was impressed upon me how rapidly they go out of date, how fast teaching methods change, and how interesting those of the past are to modern educators—and to everyone else, as a matter of fact.

"Coming across several battered McGuffey readers, their worn and limp pages scrawled with childish notations, I realized what a great number of young people had been taught to read by these little books, and had incidentally stored away a great wealth of information in the process. I could not help but think of the part McGuffeys had played in molding minds of men and women later to become great. So I decided to save all I could find. The collection has been growing ever since."

Today Miss Blair has about 700 McGuffey readers, including several very valuable first editions. That it is a collection beyond price is evidenced by the fact that she has turned a deaf ear to many flattering offers. Other people also realized that these celebrated readers were rapidly becoming lost or destroyed, and have started assembling them.

First Published in 1836.

It was in 1836 that William Holmes McGuffey started the series with the publication of readers for the first and second grades. Other volumes, progressing from the simplest of stories on up through accounts of historical events and excerpts from literary gems, followed rapidly. The information they contained cropped out in public affairs for the next 50 years. Quotations from McGuffey's rang from pulpits and thundered from editorials. As one wise old woman recently said in a sentimental tone, "I owe an eternal debt to McGuffey's!"

Miss Blair has become an authority on American textbooks through her profession and her hobby. V. Volta Parma, curator of rare books in the Congressional Library, asked her to spend a few days with him during her Washington visit to help him select some of the valuable old textbooks from the library shelves for the rare-book section.

Miss Blair's love of books and her knowledge of their care has made it possible for her to direct the largest women's FERA project in the United States with success. Under her supervision 1,000 women have repaired more than 2,000,000 books, which are now back in circulation. The work was done for the Detroit public schools.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF JULY 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m., and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m.

Will power will possibly be the determining factor in your affairs this day, as it may be mainly through perseverance that efforts can reap their desired reward. It might be wisdom to remember that you often gain more by listening than you do by talking. Salesmanship is likely to play the most important part in trading results, so the commercial market's reaction is probably depending on the amount of activity displayed by those on the firing line.

If a woman and July 2 is your birthday, you will have to refrain from allowing yourself to become too self-satisfied, if you wish to achieve a worth-while position socially or in business.

Any form of artistic work should have a strong appeal, as you have the capacity to appreciate the beautiful to the fullest extent.

The child born on July 2 will possibly, when it reaches its teens, show a preference for a professional career, rather than a commercial one, or a life of ease.

If a man and July 2 is your natal day, if you accord those working under or with you, kindly consideration, they probably will be instrumental in helping you reach the top rung of the ladder. Architecture, engineering, insurance, real estate, as well as educational work, may enable you to display your qualifications to the best advantage.

Sun Takes 250 Million Years To Turn Once, Says Scientist

The report presents the most recent concepts of stellar universe as evolved from the rapidly increasing mass of telescopic and spectoscopic observations.

This knowledge is strikingly summarized by Dr. J. S. Plaskett, of the Canadian Dominion Observatory, who describes the structure and rotation of the galaxy in which the earth's sun is one of billions of stars.

The galaxy is a roughly circular disc, 200,000 light years wide and 10,000 light years thick. It contains 200,000,000,000 stars, of which our sun is a fair average.

Space between the stars is not empty but filled with "cosmic dust." This substance probably contains all the elements present on the earth. Calcium has been detected in it. There is one gram of dust to 100 septrillion cubic centimeters.

Our sun is about 40,000 light years, or about one-half way from the center of the disc.

The whole disc is revolving around its center of gravity at a speed of 300 kilometers a second, nearly 2,000 times faster than man ever has traveled.

So vast are the dimensions of the galaxy that it requires 250,000,000 years for the sun to make a single revolution.

1,000 Girl Scouts To Open Camps

Langdon Park Is First Weekly Outing Site.

About 1,000 Girl Scouts who have not joined the summer camp in Harrisonburg, Va., will start a day camp in Washington's parks for July and August. The girls will bring their own lunches or materials to cook in the camps. From 9 o'clock in the morning to 4 in the afternoon they will be busy with nature study, singing, working on handicrafts, games and other activities.

Mrs. Charles H. Corlett is the chairman of the day camp, with Henry Robb, a paid worker, in actual charge of the camping events.

Delano to Head Merged Group Of Planners

New Association Seeks to Promote Best Use of Natural Resources.

Frederic A. Delano was elected president and George W. White treasurer of the American Planning and Civic Association yesterday at the organization meeting which sealed the merger of the American Civic Association and the National Conference on City Planning.

Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt, is chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. White is president of the National Metropolitan Bank.

"The purposes of the new association," it was stated, "will include the promotion of public understanding and support of national, regional, State and local planning for the best use of urban and rural land, water and other natural resources; the advancing of higher ideals of civic life and beauty in America, and the safeguarding and development for the largest good to the people of natural wonders and scenic possessions and of national and other parks and recreational facilities."

Newly elected vice presidents are Harold S. Buttenheim, of New York, president of the old National Conference on City Planning; Horace M. Albright, of New York, former director of the National Park Service, and Col. Richard Lieber, of Indianapolis.

Miss Harlean James, who was executive secretary of the American Civic Association, will continue in the same capacity with the new organization. Flavel Shurtleff, secretary of the former conference, will be special counsel.

Former New York offices of the conference, which was founded here in 1909, will be retained as a branch, but main headquarters of the combined group will be located in the Union Thust Building here. The American Civic Association was organized in St. Louis 31 years ago and was instrumental in the creation of the Federal Government's National Park Service and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

2 Local Reporters Appeal Sentence

With their defense counsel fortified by former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, and Stuart S. Janney, Pat Frank and David Lee, Washington Herald reporters, sentenced to 90 days for contempt in connection with the publication of the purported verdict in the John Boland case, took appeals in Montgomery County yesterday.

Meanwhile, American Newspapers, Inc., publishers of the Washington Herald, paid the $5,000 fine imposed by the court in the same case, it was learned late yesterday.

The contempt proceedings grew out of the sensational trial which centered around blonde Mrs. Anne Lyddane, member of an old Rockville family, who was charged, with Boland and several others, with conspiring to bring about the murder of her husband, Francis (Slom) Lyddane.

Civil Service Head Protests Exemption

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday wrote Vice President Garner that he "earnestly protests" against the exemption of positions under the new Federal Alcohol Control Administration from the merit system.

He pointed out that the enforcement of the Volstead and other prohibition statutes "led to charges of utmost corruption" because of the exemption of employes from the civil service act.

Gibson Condemns House Airport Bill

Senator Declares Nation Should Share Cost.

While District airport legislation appeared dead for this session of Congress Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, author of the Gravelly Point bill, yesterday issued a statement condemning the selective commission measure that passed the House.

Declaring that this country should have a national airport comparable to Croydon in England and Le Bourget in France, Senator Gibson said:

"The Nation should bear a fair portion of the expense of its construction and operation. The Federal Government shared with the railroads the cost of building Union Station, one of the finest in the country, and would no doubt be willing to share with the District of Columbia the expense of one of the finest airports in the world."

Senator Gibson's bill provides that the expense shall be shared equally by the Federal and District governments and that the former will lend the latter its share for ten years. The House bill saddles the entire cost on the District.

Sale Starts Tomorrow For Sunset Concerts

Tickets for the "Sunset Symphony" concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra, which begin July 14 at the watergate beside the Arlington Memorial Bridge, will be placed on sale tomorrow.

Tickets will sell for 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. Season tickets and ticket strips will be offered at special prices, C. C. Cappel, orchestra manager, said.

The sale will be conducted at the orchestra's box office on the main floor of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Fourteenth and F streets northwest.

Stephens Chosen For Advancement

Nominated to Be Assistant to Attorney General.

Harold Montelle Stephens was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to succeed William Stanley as assistant to the Attorney General. Now an Assistant Attorney General, a post to which he was appointed two years ago, Mr. Stephens formerly practiced law in Salt Lake City.

The nominee for the second highest position in the Department of Justice is 40 years old, a writer on legal subjects and a holder of advanced degrees from Harvard, Cornell and California universities. He lives at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mr. Stanley recently resigned to return to private practice in Baltimore.

President Roosevelt also nominated Lester A. Walton as minister to Liberia.

5th Reserve District Low On Failures

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—The Fifth Federal Reserve district led all 12 districts in the United States in reducing the number of bankruptcies in May, Chairman William Hoxton reported today in his monthly resume of business and credit conditions.

"The commercial failure record for May in the Fifth District," he said, "was the best record made by any of the 12 reserve districts, bankruptcies in the district last month (May) numbering only 27 in comparison with 64 in May, 1934, and last month's aggregate liabilities of $507,813 comparing with $1,706,753 in May last year."

Business in May and the first half of June in the five States of the district "averaged about up to seasonal trends," with tobacco manufacturing continuing at "a very high level," a small increase in textile and coal production, and a "rather disappointing" record of retail sales.

Washington provided an exception to the failure of retail records to measure up to Fifth district merchants' hopes for May. Increase of 8.7 per cent over May, 1934, was recorded there, while retail sales in the district as a whole were only nine-tenths of 1 per cent above the like month last year.

Fifty-eight wholesale firms reported an increase over May, 1934, in business done in groceries, hardware and drugs, with substantial decreases in dry goods and shoes.

Hoxton reported that rediscounts at the Richmond Bank rose between May 15 and June 15 by $475,000, with the portfolio of open market paper remaining unchanged. An increase of $357,000 in loans to industry for working capital was reported, with a gain in ownership of Government securities of $3,153,000. A new increase of $3,985,000 in the bank's total earning assets resulted from these changes.

Debits to individual, firm and corporation accounts during the five-week period ended June 12 decreased 1.1 per cent, compared with a period ended May 8, reports from banks in 23 trade centers showed.

4 Marylanders Held As Cattle Rustlers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bayard, W. Va., July 1.—C. J. Hanft, Blackie Stewart, Hubert Wilson and Ellen Gregory, of Table Rock section, Garrett County, Md., have been arrested for cattle rustling. They are charged with butchering near Mount Storm, a steer belonging to Daniel T. Williams, who, it is stated, has lost a number of cattle.

While officers were assisting in the search for the men, they discovered a still on the property of Joe Gregory, of near Kempton, and 3½ gallons of moonshine liquor. Gregory is being held under $500 bond for his appearance at the September term of court at Oakland, Md., on charges of possession for the purpose of sale.

Ousted President Writes Defense of His Use of U. S. Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson's official connection with the University of Maryland ended at noon yesterday with the prospect that his post as president will continue unfilled for an indefinite period.

The former president, whose resignation was requested by the university's board of regents, spent the morning and a part of the afternoon clearing out his personal effects from the desk which he has used for nine years.

As he left the administration building, we waved away queries with the brief statement he had made "no definite plans" as yet. He said, however, that he was preparing a statement concerning the use of Federal funds granted the University of Maryland since he took over the presidency.

Explains U. S. Funds.

He said he did not know when the statement would be ready for release, but said that, in view of the fact that his opponents have complained he used too much of the Federal money for the erection of buildings and for campus improvements, he wished to make it perfectly clear the funds were obtained on the stipulation they be used for no other purpose.

H. C. Byrd, vice president and director of athletics at the State school, was supposed today to have assumed the office of acting president. There has been no formal announcement of his appointment as Dr. Pearson's temporary successor, but it was generally conceded here none will be made.

Byrd Away on Business.

Byrd was out of his office most of the day, on business in Baltimore and Washington, officials said.

At his home in Kensington, Dr. W. W. Skinner, secretary of the board of regents, asserted no meeting of the university's governing body has been set to consider a new president. He said there was "no hurry" about the matter and that the regents preferred their action to be "deliberate."

Although Byrd has been boomed in some quarters as the likely choice, the general consensus among university officials is that he will prefer to retain his present position.

Piper, who will be given a hearing tomorrow, is charged with "employing a man to perform plumbing work without said man having obtained a license."

Murder Case Search Nets New Suspect

Other Prisoner Moved After Crowd Gathers at Bel Air Jail.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., July 1.—The search for suspects in the fatal stabbing of Kelly C. Terry during a dance at a tavern Saturday night led today to Chester Pa., where State police arrested John Ellis, 28, of that place.

Ellis had been named by Sheriff John N. Bennett of Kent County as one of the men sought for questioning. Ellis was said by the sheriff to have attended the dance.

William Pruitt, taken into custody last night at Bel Air and ordered held for the October term of circuit court, was taken to the State police station at Conowingo, near Bel Air.

Crowd at Jail.

Although no reason was given for the transfer of Pruitt, ten State police officers under Lieut. Ruxton Ridgeley were summoned here during the night after a crowd of some 200 people had been milling around outside the Kent County Jail. There was no evidence of violence.

Pruitt denied being near the tavern of Olin B. Stafford Saturday night. He told authorities he was in Bel Air, went to bed about 9 p. m. and arose at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Terry was struck down about midnight by a knife plunged into his heart. Several witnesses at the inquest placed Pruitt in the tavern a short time before the slaying.

Pruitt, the witnesses testified, had been accosted by Terry after the former allegedly made some remarks about Mrs. Terry because of her refusal to dance with him.

Weapon Not Seen.

Acting State's Attorney Thomas F. Healy was unable to find any witness who had seen the knife used in the stabbing.

Bennett today indicated murder charges may be placed against someone besides Pruitt.

Mrs. Terry, the former Gladys Everett, of Chestertown, was prostrated by the death of her husband.

Terry's funeral will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home. Burial will be in Chester Cemetery.

Dr. Bowman Head Of Johns Hopkins

Succeeds Dr. J. S. Ames as President of School.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 1. — Dr. Isaiah Bowman, former president of the American Geographic Society and chairman of the National Research Council, today succeeded Dr. Joseph S. Ames as president of Johns Hopkins University.

Asserting he intended to make a thorough study of the problems of the university before advancing his opinion as to their solution, Dr. Bowman said he would remain here ten days to confer with faculty members and would actively assume the presidency September 10.

Dr. Bowman said he did not plan to inaugurate a chair or department of geography, his own specialty, because "the problems of the university are sufficient at present without adding to them. He said, however, he would not give up his connection with geography.

Liquor's Net Double That Of Estimates

Most Virginia Cities to Put Share Into General Fund.

ABC Gross Business of Year Now Placed at $12,750,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—Net profits of the ABC board for the fiscal year which ended Saturday today were reported "slightly more than twice as much as the 1934 Assembly estimated" and most Virginia cities, according to an incomplete survey, were planning to turn their share into their general funds without earmarking.

A. B. Clarke, head of the ABC statistical division, said the net profits were estimated at $3,500,000 in contrast to the predicted $1,675,000. Total gross business in the year was estimated by Mr. Clarke as $12,750,000. Total receipts since operations started were put at $13,527,170.86. Exact figures will be available about August 1.

Suffolk, Fredericksburg, Petersburg, Danville and Roanoke reported today that officials planned to place their shares of the profits in the general funds. Richmond expects to set aside its share for relief purposes. The general opinion of Norfolk officials was that the money should go into the city's general fund, although three members of the council expressed the belief the money should go for relief.

Localities of the State will get approximately $1,000,000 of the profits, distributed on a population basis.

It was reported here today that Suffolk had anticipated the allocation definitely and in the budget for the fiscal year, but it could not be determined whether other cities had counted upon the profits in drawing up their budgets.

Court at Staunton Calls Murder Cases

Harman and Clark to Face Juries Within Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 1.—Judge Richard S. Ker has set the dates for two murder cases in corporation court.

Robert D. Harman, Staunton youth, will face a jury July 8 on the charge that he murdered Roy Britt, September 9, 1933, while George W. Clark, garment factory mechanic, will be tried July 10 on an indictment for the death May 22 of Mrs. Frances Stanley Sutton, 19, pretty expectant mother.

Britt was found unconscious at the fair grounds on the last night of the 1933 fair. He died a short time later. Two months ago Harman surrendered to police and said Britt had attacked him, jumping on the running board of his car. In beating off the attack Harman said he knocked Britt off the machine, ran over him and dragged the body between the tents on the fair grounds.

Clark was seen on the night of May 22 carrying the form of a woman from an apartment-hotel here. A half hour later he arrived at the hospital with Mrs. Sutton's body. The Commonwealth will maintain that Mrs. Sutton died as a result of an attempted criminal operation.

Control Expense On Wheat Is Low

Washington County Reports Cost Cut to $635.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1.—Administrative costs of the Wheat Production Control Association in Washington County was the lowest of any county in Maryland, according to an announcement made today by County Agent Milton D. Moore.

Washington County's allotment for administrative expense was .9 cent, which netted $1,300. Of this amount, the association spent but $635.40.

The State average for administrative costs was 1.7 cents, with the heaviest administrative allotment being in Anne Arundel County—3.4 cents. Baltimore County was a close second with 3.3 cents, while Frederick was the next lowest to Washington with 1.2 cents. Four hundred farmers participated in the wheat production control.

Tomatoes Are Hope Of Maryland Farmers

Crisfield, Md., July 1 (AP).—With hundreds of acres of Somerset County's string bean crop plowed into the ground, unpicked because of low prices, farmers today were looking to the tomato season hoping to recoup at least a portion of their losses.

Almost all wrapping and packing houses were expected to be in operation by the end of this week.

Young Gunman Caught When Woman Noticed His Tag Number.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrenceville, Va., July 1.—Elmer M. Beasley, 25, today pleaded guilty before Judge M. R. Peterson in Brunswick Circuit Court to charges of holding up and robbing the bank of Alberta, Va., of $1,618 on June 4, and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Sheriff H. E. Valentine reported to the court that $500 of the currency taken from the bank in a daylight holdup was recovered following Beasley's arrest in a Sutton, W. Va., hotel last week. The youthful gunman had been traced by the license plates on the car in which he fled from Alberta. These were seen by a woman living near the North Carolina border, who saw a speeding car similar to that in which the bandit escaped and reported to police.

Since Beasley already had confessed to Sheriff H. E. Valentine that he robbed the bank, his case occupied but a short time in the Brunswick County Court.

Mrs. Ruby Beasley, his wife, who was with him when he was arrested in West Virginia, had no connection with the robbery and charges were not placed against her.

Potatoes Flow From Virginia At $2 a Barrel

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., July 1.—Potato farmers eased their grip on exports today enough to permit the largest volume of shipments from Virginia's shore since the producers took control of the market last Wednesday.

Potatoes left the peninsula in an increasing flow by freight cars, boats and trucks, with buyers paying the $2 a barrel base price and obeying other regulations decreed by the growers' six-man war council.

Fifty checkers were maintained on duty at the Maryland line to examine the credentials of truck drivers, who were required to carry invoices showing they had paid growers the specified price and were not trucking on consignment.

Box cars were being loaded, too, and wharves buzzed with activity as tubers rolled into the big end of the producer-to-consumer marketing funnel.

Youth Indicted As Murderer Of Miss Kurz

Suspect Confessed After Arrest in South on Minor Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 1.—A special Federal District Court grand jury today indicted Earl Conner Williams, 23-year-old Negro, for the "Lover's Lane" murder of Miss Fannie Kurz near Fredericksburg in May, 1934.

Williams was bound over for grand jury consideration at a preliminary hearing before Commissioner Melvin Flegenheimer several days ago.

Arrest of the Negro in Mississippi on a minor charge several months ago brought what officers said was a solution to a crime that had puzzled investigators for a year. Williams was said to have made a detailed confession to Government agents.

The case comes under Federal jurisdiction because it was in a military reservation that an assailant killed Miss Kurz and brutally beat her companion, George Milton Brown, before robbing him.

$2,359,960 Is Cut On Richmond Taxes

Richmond, Va., July 1 (AP).—The board of equalization today reported a reduction of $2,359,960 in total assessments on taxable property in Richmond. The board during the six months it was in session held hearings on 2,469 complaints against tax assessments, it reported.

Quesenberry Trial Waits On New Panel

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., July 1.—Opening testimony was delayed by unwilling veniremen as Thomas (Old Tom) Quesenberry, picturesque 56-year-old Virginia mountaineer, went on trial for his life in circuit court here today, charged with the murder of Clarence J. McClary, Alexandria policeman.

McClary was shot March 17 while he and 60 others were engaged in a manhunt for Quesenberry in the foothills seven miles south of here. The hunt followed the shooting of George Kirkpatrick, a revenue agent, a few hours before.

Kirkpatrick rushed upon the photographer, demanding that the film be destroyed. He refused to identify himself as a revenue agent and, screaming threats, seized the film which had been withdrawn from the camera and furiously tore it apart.

Today Quesenberry, clean shaven and passive, stuck to his mountain code of silence and spoke only the defiant words "not guilty," when brought before the court. Unmanacled, subdued and a bit worn after almost four months in a steel cell at the local jail, Old Tom seemed uninterested as the court began with a plea for abatement introduced by Stilson H. Hall, chief council for the defense. Judge J. R. H. Alexander denied the plea.

Leaning forward and cupping his ear, the giant moonshiner displayed more interest as veniremen were examined. One, it was rumored, had had trouble with Quesenberry. He was dismissed on the grounds of having formed an opinion in the case.

Others questioned for the jury told the court that they were against capital punishment. They were quickly dismissed.

Exhausting the venire of 26 men, Judge Alexandria adjourned court until tomorrow. Only 12 veniremen were acceptable to the court. More veniremen will be impaneled tomorrow.

Despite Hall's well-knit plea for abatement, Judge Alexandria overruled all 12 points as insufficien Citing technical flaws in the thi indictment, Hall claimed that th legal accusation did not state how or in what manner, the allege crime was committed.

"One of the jurors," Hall continued, "who returned the third dictment, had previously consul the counsel for the accused a served as a witness in another indictment of the same case."

With the exception of objecting to a member of the jury panel, John Galleher, new Virginia NEC director acting as a special prosecutor, spoke little during the procedure. He had by his side assisting him, G. Stanley Clarke, assistant attorney general of Virginia.

State Police Teach Gov. Nice How to Curb Robust Handshake

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 1.—Gov. Harry W. Nice today was taught how to treat a "well-wisher" whose handshake might annoy the chief executive.

While inspecting the State police department, Gov. Nice was instructed by two patrolmen how he could bring the greeter to his knees with a cry of help if the man grasped the Governor's hand too firmly.

"I'll have to remember that," commented Nice. "I've had the experience of overly enthusiastic handclasps."

Sixty-five members of the department lined up with their motorcycles, patrol cars and combination station cars and ambulance, for the inspection by the Governor. The department was segregated from the motor vehicle commission a month ago.

Maj. J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of the department, and Capt. Edward McK. Johnson accompanied the Governor during the inspection. Guests included Dr. Albert S. Cook, superintendent of Schools; Dr. Robert H. Riley, health commissioner; John J. Ghingher, bank commissioner; Harry C. Jones, employment commissioner, and Robert F. Duer, chairman of the conservation commission.

The department was termed by Gov. Nice as "one of the most important in the State government," adding that "it will become increasingly important as time goes on."

The spectators received the worse of a gas demonstration. State patrolmen, wearing masks, were unaffected when they entered a garage filled with the gas, but some of the fumes, seeping through the doors, blew in the direction of a group of persons watching the exhibition.

Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever" Booked for Earle Week of Friday, July 12

By Nelson B. Bell.

Corroborating this column's frequent contention that there is no longer discernible any difference in quality of screen product as between the film plays released for midsummer consumption and those made available in the dead of the winter "season," comes the weekend announcement from John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, that "Love Me Forever," Grace Moore's new Columbia production, definitely has been booked for the Earle Theater the week of Friday, July 12—one week from next Friday, or three days less than a fortnight in the future.

In the old days of the silent pictures and unrefrigerated theaters this would have been an unprecedented piece of managerial shortsightedness, this "wasting" of a major subject at a time of year when nobody might reasonably be expected to go see it.

But the "old days of the silent pictures" is not the present, so midsummer takes no back seat to midwinter in the excellence of its camera entertainment.

Promises to be Hit.

These observations are prompted by the fact that "Love Me Forever" promises to be no less sensational a hit than its prize-winning predecessor, "One Night of Love," Miss Moore's first essay at camera drama, which turned out to be the film that made practically a clean sweep of the annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

It is a mere coincidence that Mr. Skolsky should have devoted the greater portion of his colmn, appearing elsewhere on this page today, to a consideration of "Love Me Forever." More important, however, than Mr. Skolsky's interesting comments on this picture in the making are the results of the first day or two of its public exhibition at the Radio City Music Hall in New York.

Bettering the opening day receipts of "One Night of Love" by more than $1,400, "Love Me Forever" enjoyed a triumphant premiere in New York last Thursday, the critical fraternity manifesting as great a degree of enthusiasm over its many excellences as the lay public that stormed the box-office.

The consensus of critical opinion seemed to be that "Love Me Forever" presents "a veritable wedding of cinema and opera."

Star's Voice Prime Factor.

It is said to reveal a more distinguished cast, a more powerful story, greater variety of scene and more beautiful settings than its illustrious forebear in the line of Moore hits.

All of these material advantages, of course, in any final analysis must be subordinated to the glorious voice and gracious presence of Grace Moore herself, who sings such contrasting numbers as "Jingle "Jingle Bells" and arias from "La Boheme;" "The Bells of St. Mary's" and selections from Rigoletto."

Leo Carillo heads the supporting cast in the role of an Italian music lover who sponsors Miss Moore's operatic debut—a character obviously the counterpart of that played by Tullio Carminati in "One Night of Love." Luis Alberni, remembered as the voice coach in the earlier picture, and Spring Byington add comedy touches here and there and Michael Bartlett shares the vocal responsibilities of the Puccini and Verdi arias with the star.

Now then, add all this to what Mr. Skolsky has told you in his column and the opening at the Earle on Friday, July 12, ought to be anticipated with considerable pleasure and no little impatience.

From a few vagrant bulletins from the prolific mimeograph of the National Civic Theater Society, personal calls from Director John Mann and Publicist Robert St. Francis Hurleigh and an Einsteinian ability to put two and two together and make eight or ten, one suspects that the newly formed acting group, which decidedly has "caught on" with the Capital's summertime theatergoers, will continue its run in Emlyn Williams' mystery-melodrama, "A Murder Has Been Arranged," through Wednesday of the current week, opening "The Bride the Sun Shines On" with a holiday performance Thursday night, July 4. This second of the productions to be unfurled in The Odeon, on the grounds of the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., will be directed by Forney Reese.

The society's third offering will be "Men in White," the Pulitzer prize winner of season before last, under the direction of John Mann. A speaking cast of 28 is required for this drama of doctors, internes and nurses in a large metropolitan hospital. Since the play has not heretofore been seen in Washington, but the picture has, it may be said that John Sikken will have the role Clark Gable played for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Robert Pitkin the Jean Hersholt part.

Hellman the Maney Topic.

It is that breezy Broadway scrivener, Mr. Richard Maney—and anything breezy certainly is welcome on days like these—who calls attention to the fact that with "The Children's Hour" aproaching its 600th performance at the Maxine Elliott Theater in New York, the while it thumbs its nose at the thermometer, the Pulitzer Prize jury and the cynics, who hold to the tradition that a tragedy, at best can have a run of only short duration, it seems high time that word be said about Lillian Hellman, the young woman who wrote it.

Everybody else, from Producer Shumlin through the heretofore unknown members of the cast to the "prop" boy and stage door keeper, has had a touch of Mr. Maney's inky accolades, but not Miss Hellman. So—o—o . . . . .

Lillian Hellman was born in New Orleans 30 years ago. "The Children's Hour" is her first and only produced play. Educated in the New York public schools, she was undistinguished as a scholar and in her brief term at New York University won no academic honors.

Became a Reader.

Leaving that institution she became a reader for the publishing house of Boni and Liveright and thereafter was successively press agent for an experimental theater group, a playreader for Anne Nichols, of "Abie's Irish Rose" renown, a book reviewer for the New York Herald-Tribune, publicist for Leo Bulgakov, promotion agent for a Rochester, N. Y., stock company and a meager-paid member of the scenario department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures in Hollywood.

In between these skimpy chores, she made two trips to Europe, was married and wrote stories "full of tremulous moments" for the periodicals—none of which was accepted.

Returning from a second futile assault on the battlements of Hollywood, she attracted the favorable attention of George Jean Nathan, then on the American Spectator. He not only applauded her work, he printed it. That was the beginning.

Tore Up Six Drafts.

She began work on "The Children's Hour"—Percy Hammond's selection as the season's best play—in the late summer of 1933. She tore it up six times and finally finished it last May.

Once an outskirts of Hollywood hoverer-arounder, she now toils there for the practically handsome sum of $2,000 per week.

Such, little kiddies, are a few of the reasons "show business" is such a fascinating racket. The recipe is simple. All you have to do is put over a hit.

The first "try-out" of the summer season opens tonight at the Roadside Theater, out the Rockville pike 4 miles the other side of Bethesda, Md., when "Grand Gesture," a new play by Winona Godfrey, will be presented for the first time on any stage. This enterprise marks the return of the Roadsiders to the fulfillment of one of the major functions of the "barn theater"—to test the merits of a new play prior to a Broadway hearing, if it proves worthy of one.

The new play is, first and foremost, so I am told, a love story with a serious note. The four principal figures in the narrative are discribed to this column as real people and not merely stereotyped and familiar theatrical "types." Denis Connell, Virginia Rand, Adele Gusack and Edward Stevlingson will be seen in the major roles under the direction of Harrold Weinberger. Incidentally, the three revolving stages at the Roadside will be in operation tonight and henceforth—all having been found to work perfectly—thus facilitating the usually cumbersome and tedious business of changing sets.

Doubled and Vulnerable!

Wire advices hot from Hollywood as this is written bring word that within ten days the Warner Brothers-First National organization will begin work which, when completed, will double the productional capacity of their studios.

Nine sound stages, a property building, shop building, exterior sets and other structures will be added to the Burbank plant.

It is estimated that six months will be needed to complete the construction work. When present plans are consummated, the new stages will bring the total on the lot to 18. Officials of the company claim this will give the Burbank properties the largest stage floor area in the motion picture industry, on either side of the Atlantic.

Tonight all of the resident Duses, Boothes, Coquelins, Bernhardts, Jolsons, Cardinis, Kate Smiths, Tetrazzinis, Nordicas, Carusos, "Bill" Robinsons, George M. Cohans, Noel Cowards, Hal LeRoys, Boswell Sisters, Ed Wynns and the like will have their innings. Out of the scramble may come some one who, with a fair chance, will set the theater world on fire. Who can tell? Stranger things have happened many times before than that some exceptional personality should emerge from a casual quest for amateur talent to lend luster to a specific occasion. Tonight may be the night—not of the occasion but of the preparation for it and the initiation of a search for talent worthy of being given a chance to make good on the big time.

In short, tonight is the night of the first audition for places in the cast of principals of "Going Native," the third edition of the all-Washington revue, fostered annually by the Loew's interests in the Capital. The place is the National Theater; the time, 8 o'clock, en punto—meaning "sharp"—as we say in the pure Castilian. So many applications have been received that three nights of auditions will be held to cover the field. Those selected will be paid professional salaries for the week the revue will run on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater. That will be somewhere in the early part of August. Line forms at the right.

"Lefty" Again.

Encouraged by the enthusiastic reception accorded their first production of "Waiting for Lefty," the Odets play of strife among the workers, the New Theater group of Washington announce a repeat performance of the play in the auditorium of the National Press Club tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock.

This play is now in its sixth successful month in New York. Washington theatergoers, likewise, have manifested a keen interest in social drama and it is for this reason that "Waiting for Lefty" is to be presented again here—as it has been in 20 other cities outside of New York.

The play is frankly provocative. It deals with an explosive topic and has been both praised and condemned according to the point of view of the specific commentator. It is one of the things with which one needs must be conversant if he is to keep abreast of contemporary discussion of the theater and its significant "trends."

Errol Flynn, who crashed the front pages with his recent marriage to Lili Damita, exotic stage and screen star, will be visible on the screen at the Earle Theater, come Friday, in "Don't Bet on Blondes." Miss Damita is a blonde. Heh-heh-heh!

Fly-by-Night Note.

What with the office aswim with millions of pestilential insects coming up from the river to the bright lights of the avenue offices, would you call the dramatic department bughouse?

Or merely a swell gnat-atorium?

I heard you the first time!

The Gossipel Truth

HOLLYWOOD, JULY 1.

KATHARINE HEPBURN returns to the stage, for she will appear in Max Reinhardt's production of "Twelfth Night" at the Hollywood Bowl . . . The Busby Berkeleys—she is Merna Kennedy—have decided to go their separate ways . . . Charlie Chaplin has finally titled his new flicker. He calls it "The Great Factory" . . . Carole Lombard is giving a stag party for her girl friends at the Clover Club Monday night . . . Irving Thalberg flew to New York last week secretly and stayed there four days without any publicity given to the visit. There is plenty doing in the executive offices at Metro . . . After Jerome Kern played the score he had written for her flicker, Lily Pons walked over to the piano and kissed Kern—which is a nice kind of criticism . . . Marlene Dietrich has four bodyguards but no cook in her house. She cooks all the meals herself. She likes to cook very much. Now, if she could only act I'd marry her.

Jed Harris had several enticing deals to produce pictures while here, but they all fell through. Jed was very evasive, and Arch Selwyn, who was handling all negotiations, had his troubles. Jed would keep demanding different terms every day, never giving a yes or a no. One day Selwyn rushed over to United Artists very elated. "I just saw Harris," said Selwyn, "and I got a definite maybe." . . . Harry Cohn is very proud since he was elected president of Columbia Pictures and nearly every one at the studio refers to him as "the prez." In fact, Harry was given a watch and on it is inscribed: "To Harry Cohn—the best president since Abraham Lincoln."

ROCHELLE HUDSON asked a publicity man at Fox, several weeks ago, to take her on the set of "Way Down East" because she wanted to see and meet Henry Fonda. Now, Miss Hudson is Fonda's leading lady in that flicker—and she's excited about the love scenes . . . Fonda, by the way, a few days ago went on the set of "So Red the Rose" to watch ex-wife Margaret Sullavan work . . . Myrna Loy gets into New York on the Champlain on Wednesday . . . Lure to Catalina for Alice Faye was Dick Stubille of the B. Bernie Band . . . Rob Wagner tells about a Hollywood party he attended at Adrian's, the Metro designer's house. They played a game there called "chain wax works." Adrian called a man and a woman into a small room and drew the curtains. Then he summoned another woman and said: "Now, these two people are wax figures and they're engaged. So will you please pose them in a romantic position on the couch."

• • • •

The woman, wishing to embarrass the couple, laughingly poses them with their arms around each other. Adrian then says: "Now, since you are satisfied with the pose, will you kindly change places with the lady?" Caught in her own joke, the lady has to take the pose . . . Adrian then calls in a man. He tells him the same yarn and the man, believing he can improve on the amorous tableaux, arranges the pair in a tighter clinch. When finished and laughing at his triumph, he is asked to change places with the man. This goes on and on . . . It goes to show you how they amuse themselves at a Hollywood party . . . There's the critic who didn't like "Becky Sharp" and called it "Becky Dull."

• • • •

EDDIE BUZZELL sat in for Sylvia Sidney at the "Accent on Youth" preview and held hands with Norman Krasna . . . Garbo's new flicker, "Anna Karenina," was previewed the other night. It is the best picture Garbo has made in several years and much of the credit should go to Director Clarence Brown . . . Edith Wilkerson tells about George S. Kaufman meeting a pal and telling him that he was going to dinner at Sam Goldwyn's. This greatly surprised the friend, for he knew that Kaufman is still suing Goldwyn for thousands of dollars because of the Eddie Cantor flicker, "Roman Scandals." Therefore, the friend couldn't believe that Kaufman was going to Goldwyn's. "Yes," answered George. "I'm going to call up Sam now and ask him if it's formal or whether I should just wear my lawsuit."

• • • •

Noel Coward, when he returns to America, will go to Hollywood to do a flicker for Metro . . . William Gargan and Warners are tiffing . . . Regardless of the number of actresses, they have Tom Brown romancing, the genuine gal friend is Jane Mullen, a debutante . . . A certain producer—do I have to mention his name?—was attending a party in Beverly Hills. He went for a stroll in the garden with the host . . . The producer saw a sun dial and was puzzled. "What's that?" he asked. The host answered, "A sun dial." The producer viewed it carefully. "A sun dial," he said. "What's that for?" The host explained, "You can tell the time by it." The producer shook his head. "They're always thinking up something new, aren't they?"

Concert by the Nathaniel Dett Choral Society (Virginia Williams, director) at the Sylvan Theater. Program: "Gently, Lord, O Gently Lead Us" (Dett), "Sky So Bright" (Dickinson), "As by the Streams of Babylon" (Campion), "Hymn to the Trinity" (Chaikovski), "Lord, Have Mercy" (Lvovski), "Come, Let Us Return" (Kalinov), "Souls of the Righteous" (Noble), "O Joyful Sound" (Schlieder), "A Prayer for Guidance" (Brockway), "O Hear the Lambs," "I'll Never Turn Back" and "Let Us Cheer the Weary Traveler" (Dett), and a group of Negro spirituals.

Whether the cause was the brooding and lethargic heat or the uncustomary hour of the program, a relatively small audience assembled in the Monument Grounds late yesterday afternoon for the concert by the Nathaniel Dett Choral Society. The temperature was conducive neither to hearty singing nor to enthusiastic reception and the proceedings were more listless than exhilarating. One would judge from the modest size of the chorus that many of its members were absent.

With these disadvantages, the organization did not have the opportunity to show its capabilities. As the chorus was constituted, the male voices were insufficient in number for an adequate performance of the Russian liturgical compositions, which demand a sonorous complement of barytones and bassos. Good ryhthmic integrity and precision of attack did not compensate for the weakness of the massed tone.

The singing group was at its best in the numbers by R. Nathaniel Dett and in the closing section of spirituals, which were infused with sincere feeling. The most effective of these racial songs were "There's body's Knocking at Your Door," in a Meeting Here Tonight" and "Somewhich emotional tensity came strongly to the fore.

The Baer Facts.

Boston, July 1.

BROADWAY'S prize sap at this writing appears to be Mr. Ancil Hoffman, whose yokelish tactics as manager of Max Baer have left them both behind the fistic eight ball, which, in Broadwayese, is another way of saying that they blew the duke. Mr. Baer, no shining model for American youth himself, is nevertheless perfectly entitled to sue Mr. Hoffman for a large amount for conduct unbecoming a manager.

POVICH.

After Baer had been relieved of his world heavyweight championship by Jimmy Braddock a fortnight ago, the realization that he had forgotten something slowly permeated the skull of Mr. Hoffman. He had forgotten, it seems, the little matter of providing for Baer a return bout with Braddock if, perchance, Braddock won his man's title.

This bit of absent-mindedness, or maybe it was just plain ignorance, on the part of Mr. Hoffman was as fine a piece of butchering of managerial duties as has ever caused Broadway to chuckle. It was not only unforgivable, but almost unbelievable, and surely unexcelled as a new low for managerial acumen. What could the man have been thinking about? Surely he knew better than that. Or perhaps he didn't. There are two schools of thought on the matter.

But the fact remains, as facts inevitably do, that Mr. Hoffman failed to give Baer the protection in the fight contract that every world champion has a right to expect from his manager. Baer lost his title and with it a chance to reassert himself pronto in a return bout. He is now definitely on the outside looking in and left to the whims and fancies of unfriendly promoters.

THE unforgivable part of it is that Hoffman, more than any other manager in modern heavyweight history, was in a position to dictate terms for the title bout. He had Madison Square Garden dead to rights. The Garden promoters were at his mercy, eager as they were to continue Baer's contract which was to expire with the Braddock bout.

There wasn't another Garden protege in sight. Its chief rival, the Twentieth Century Club, had already sewed up the services of Joe Louis and Primo Carnera, the only other heavyweights who figured to draw a gate big enough to pay the expenses of any outdoor show. Baer, at the time that Hoffman signed the contract for the Braddock fight, represented the difference between isolation of the Garden from the outdoor extravaganzas and virtual dominance of the field.

As I was saying, it was then that Hoffman was in a position to dictate, to dominate. The Garden, fearful that Baer might escape, would have been willing to grant Hoffman every favor asked. A return bout with Braddock in the event that Baer lost his title would have been written into the contract willingly at the first asking. It would only be natural.

But Hoffman, riding high in the saddle, seemingly in complete control of the situation, muffed it. There was no return clause bout in the contract should Baer lose. He lost, and you know what happened. Thanks to Hoffman, who city-slicked both himself and Baer, the pair of 'em will figure in another title contract only when, as and if the Garden feels so disposed. It's colossal.

In Short.

HERE in Boston they are anticipating the match between an O'Mahoney, who owns one-half of the world's wrestling championship, and Don George, who has title to the other half . . . the fact that they are stablemates under the operation of the same manager won't prevent them from meeting . . . or prevent 35,000 Boston addicts from paying their way to the show . . . most logical prediction: O'Mahoney and George will crash skulls in midair and the bout will be called a draw—return match in three weeks . . . Tom Yawkey is resigned to the probability that the Red Sox will not figure in the pennant race this season . . . but says that if Joe Cronin brings one pennant to the Red Sox before his five-year contract expires he will feel repaid for the 250 grand he paid for Cronin . . . There isn't a lead-off man in the regular line-up of the team that Mickey Cochrane has picked as the American League All-Stars . . . so Charley Gehringer will probably get the job . . . Cochrane will do the catching when Tommy Bridges is facing the National Leaguers . . . Bridges is the most difficult man in the majors to catch . . . Bucky Harris was disappointed in the batting of Lyn Lary, but is shedding no tears over his release . . . Lary's brief spell of fame with the Yankees did him no good, Harris opines . . . Alan Strange, the Nats' new shortstop, is said to be the best infielder in the league at harassing runners and keeping 'em close to second base . . . he blames Rogers Hornsby for tinkering with his batting stance and ruining his batting average.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Gene Tunney, the retired and undefeated heavyweight champion of the world, has scored another of his important victories. He was issued a card as an amateur referee, and the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. in licensing him did it with pride and pleasure. Tunney, the ex-professional prize fighter, has, like so many professionals, turned amateur with a vengeance. All over the world his cups and medals are fought for, from Ceylon to London, and from Boston to California. And three strangers to our country, the English amateur boxing officials who were prepared to be testy about the referee chosen to take the ring in the international Golden Gloves team matches at the Yankee Stadium here tomorrow night, met him, shook his hand and said that it would be an honor to both England and America to have him referee the matches, and that both countries' interests would be safe in his hands.

The English fighters, as well as the Americans, are delighted to have the famous champion in the ring with them. The handsome, blue-eyed Tunney has the complete confidence of both teams.

One thing both groups of boys already know. Tunney will not stand for any holding after the command to "break." The boy who continues to hold will lose the fight. There will be no hauling boys apart or stepping between them. Gene, in splendid physical condition, will keep out of the way of the fighters, watch them for breaches of rules, keep them apart, and render a decision. Tunney has refereed amateur matches all over the world but never in his own home town and never before the vast crowd that will see him tomorrow night.

It will be really Tunney's first official public appearance here since he retired from professional competition. His will be a labor of love, because he is fond of boxing and particularly of the amateur game. He will give it a great lift by working those bouts and I think he will be startled by the warmth of the reception he will get from the crowd. And, incidentally, it is no slouch of an assignment that he has taken on for himself. Eleven bouts, if they go the limit, will last 33 rounds. That will be 99 minutes of stepping around at fighter's speed. It has been a long time since James Joseph has been ten rounds, much less 33.

Cubs Defeat Reds, Shell 4 Pitchers

Cincinnati, July 1.—Shelling four Cincinnati pitchers from the hill, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Reds in the third night game in major league history tonight, 8 to 4, before nearly 20,000 paid customers.

Dizzy Dean May Start All-Star Game July 8

St. Louis, July 1 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, St. Louis Cardinals' manager, will reserve final decision on his starting line-up in the all-star game July 8 at Cleveland, but indicated today that Dizzy Dean probably would be his first pitcher, with Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Phillies, behind the bat.

"I may change my mind," Frisch said, "but that's the way I figure now. Wilson is a smart catcher and belongs in there as No. 1 man. We want to win, of course, and we'll play to win. But the other pitchers and catchers and players in other departments also will be changed as the game goes along, in all probability."

Creighton Coach Quits.

Omaha, Nebr., July 1 (AP).—Athletic Director A. A. Schabinger, of Creighton University, today resigned his post effective July 31. He will be succeeded by Marchmont Schwartz, head football coach.

Wes Ferrell Dismisses Senators Twice With Bases Full.

By Shirley L. Povich.

By a Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, July 1.—The first of the month found the Nats flush with base hits and they turned in a swell performance—as spendthrifts. At the finish of a spree which saw 'em splatter 13 hits over the Fenway Park terrain with little regard for profit, they sadly discovered that they had squandered an 8-to-3 ball game upon Boston's conservative Red Sox.

When a hit could be translated into one, two or three runs, there was no hit forthcoming from the Nats. Thus it was that the Red Sox, inserting their own nine hits where they would do the most good, or damage, according to the viewpoint, won the ball game as early as the fifth inning.

That was when Cronin made the eighth Boston hit—a home run that disappeared over the left field wall just inside the foul line with one on base to break a 3-to-3 tie and left the Red Sox into a 5-to-3 lead.

Fourteen Nats were left on base. Twice Wes Ferrell dismissed the last Washington batter in the inning with the bases full and on three occasions a pair of Nats wended their way sadly back to their positions as Ferrell easily negotiated the third out.

Leon Pettit, who started on the mound for the Nats, was a party to the spending spree. Thrice they gave Pettit a lead and thrice he squandered it.

Kress Is Liberal.

The Sox made it conclusive in the seventh when Manager Bucky Harris rushed Red Kress to the mound. The reformed infielder permitted only one hit, but he chose a most inopportune time to yield it. He had just loaded the bases with three passes, but had succeeded in getting two out in the meantime, when Rick Ferrell blasted a double against the left-field wall to depopulate the sacks.

Three hits netted the Nats only one run in the first inning, but Pettit promptly gave a run back to Boston. The Nats stepped to the front again in the second, 2-1, but Myer left three runners stranded to end the inning, and Dahlgren's triple off Pettit tied the score again.

Once more Washington gave Pettit a one-run lead when consecutive singles by Travis, Bolton and Bluege in the third made the score 3-2, but with the bases full Kuhel grounded out meekly.

Johnson Ties Score.

A walk to Melillo paved the way for Pettit's downfall in the fifth. Johnson tied the score with a double to center and then it was that Cronin's belt over the wall put the Sox in front by two runs.

But Ferrell was in complete command after that third inning. He struck out Pinch-Hitter Fred Sington with two on base in the sixth and he struck out Pinch-Hitter Sammy Holbrook under similar conditions in the seventh. Manush and Travis managed to leave two more on base in the eighth.

Buddy Myer made great haste to continue to 20 games his consecutive game hitting streak. In his first time at bat he singled to left, the forerunner of two other singles he made.

The last sour note of the Belve Bean-Walter Stewart trade, engineered six weeks ago, was sounded today when the Washington club re-

Tigers Subdue Indians; Near 2d Place

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 1.—The Detroit Tigers moved within four points of second place in the American League standings when they whipped the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 1, today behind the five-hit hurling of Elden Auker, the submarine hurler.

The league champions connected with only eight safe blows off Thornton Lee but they took advantage of practically every opportunity with the result they altered the standings to read: Cleveland, .578; Detroit, .574.

They got away to a one-run lead in the first without getting a hit, as Lee hit Pete Fox and handed out a base on balls. Fox and Charley Gehringer worked a double steal while Greenberg was fanning, the former crossing the plate.

Woeful Braves Start Trip With Sale Still Open

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 1.—Reeling from blows that would break the stoutest baseball heart, the dispirited Boston Braves took to the road today, convinced that the worst is yet to come.

In last place by seven games, due to failures at home, their hopes hung low as they started on a full swing about the National League circuit, which will be interrupted by a flying return trip from Brooklyn for a July 4 double-header with the pace-setting Giants.

The Tribesmen appeared demoralized by their front office troubles, which seem to increase as rapidly as they lose games. Although four different groups are considering the purchase of President Emil Fuchs' mortgaged holdings, club officials have yet to receive an offer definite enough to start the dickering.

A syndicate headed by Charles J. O'Malley, of Boston, is studying data provided by Ford Frick, National League president; Joe E. Brown, baseball-minded film comedian, is due here this week to confer with Fuchs, and the other interested parties appear to be on the verge of talking business, but those familiar with the club's dire financial straits do not expect any change until August 1.

On that date, the deadline set by Charles F. Adams, vice president and dominating stockholder of the club, Fuchs must either regain possession of Adams' controlling interest or step out of the club.

Browns Beaten By Revised Chisox

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 1.—A revised White Sox line-up that didn't include Al Simmons, $27,500-a-year outfielder who hasn't been hitting, turned back the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 1, in the opening game of the series today.

A nine-hit attack, featured by Rip Radcliff's eighth homer, a triple and double by Zeke Bonura and doubles by Vernon Washington and Tony Piet, gave Sam Jones and Whit Wyatt the edge over Sugar Cain and Elton Walkup.

Jones, making his first start since he injured his arm May 22, received credit for his fourth victory.

Bunny Austin Toppled by Don Budge

Young Redhead Was But Davis Cup Substitute.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 1.—His hair gleaming like a red fireman's helmet against Wimbledon's green turf, Don Budge slew England's great Bunny Austin in a brilliant two-hour duel before 18,000 cheering fans to provide the all-England tennis championships with a stunning sensation in the quarter-final round today.

Ripping through the Briton's stylish defense to win at 3—6, 10—8, 6—4, 7—5, Budge, who came to England originally slated only as a possibility for Davis Cup doubles duty, not only survived all his American teammates in Wimbledon's singles play, but also apparently all but clinched the right to represent the United States in Davis Cup singles.

Von Cramm Next.

Budge's astounding triumph—his second victory over a seeded player in as many matches—placed him in the semifinals along with that great trio of Fred Perry, of England, the defending champion; Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, and Jack Crawford, of Australia. On Wednesday Budge will play von Cramm for the right to enter the finals against either Perry or Crawford.

A Perry-Budge final, which would have sounded fantastic a week ago, loomed as a distinct possibility tonight.

Although Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody gained the quarter-final round of women's singles, Budge's victory came as a life-saver to American fans after Sidney Wood, New Yorker, who had been counted upon to give Perry his most dangerous competition, was blasted out of the tournament by Crawford in five grueling sets, 6—4, 6—3, 6—8, 5—7, 6—1.

Backhand Big Gun.

With Queen Mary an interested spectator, the two men's singles matches in which Wood and Budge figured practically monopolized the center court for nearly five hours.

Crawford and Wood supplied some stirring tennis before Wood's game collapsed in the final set, but there was nothing to compare to the fireworks of the second feature. After dropping the first set, Budge, apparently oblivious to the huge crowd, settled down to play the finest kind of tennis against a wily, experienced opponent who ranks second only to Perry in the British Isles.

His scoring backhand, which Budge used consistently as a forc-

Chevy Chase Women Win Tourney

Defeat Beaver Dam, 9-3, in Final Matches at Woodmont.

CHEVY CHASE duplicated Columbia's feat of winning the District women's first team championship twice in a row by defeating Beaver Dam, 9 to 3, in the final matches of the season yesterday at Woodmont Country Club.

Entering the final round with a three-point advantage over their nearest pursuer, Congressional, the eight Chevy Chase women golfers played up to standard, winning three matches by clean sweeps, and losing the other.

Congressional needed a clean sweep to tie Chevy Chase, but its best was an 8½-3½ victory over Manor.

Kenwood walloped Washington Golf and Country Club, 11 to 1; Columbia blanked Indian Spring, 12 to 0, and Army and Navy turned back the host club, Woodmont, 10½ to 1½.

Team Play Results.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Y. E. Booker defeated Mrs. Peggy Jones and Miss Ellen Kincaid, 3 to 0, in the number one match. In the next match Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, of Beaver Dam, caused a big upset by winning three points from Miss Louise Claytor and Mrs. Harrison Brand, the latter Chevy Chase champion. Mrs. L. B. Platt and Miss Susan Hacker won three points from Mrs. A. W. Tucker and Mrs. Max Taylor and Mrs. L. O. Cameron

True, he won the championship playing right-handed, as he always plays these days, but he does everything else left-handed and actually used to play left-handed.

Viva Pete Wins Charles Town Feature With Brilliant Ride

Daily Double Produces $48.40

District Boy's Perfect Ride Brings Petee Wrack's Son In.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., July 1. Viva Pete, a splinter of the old block, Petee Wrack, bounced to victory today in the feature race of this dwindling turf session here in the mountains. Ridden by Eddie Smith, Viva Pete had a three-length margin over Porporphy, so there was no occasion for the booing which marked the latter's victory over Bright Spirits here last Saturday. Third in the field of eight came Patient Saint.

Smith, who makes his home in Northeast Washington, rode one of his masterpieces on the young gelding, owned by D. T. Dorner. It was one of those "the last shall be first" propositions. Viva Pete was slow to find his stride and, with a mile and a sixteenth to go, Smith seemed content to let the hore run himself into speed. After trailing his rivals to the back stretch. Viva Pete went after the leaders, picked up his field one by one, and drew out in the stretch. Porporphy, a front runner the last time out, also came from far back to outfinish Patient Saint.

Parade On Sets Pace.

Most of the pace was set by Parade On, with Jockey Obert aboard. However, this fellow folded at the head of the stretch and was out of the money after giving his backers a lot of false courage.

The daily double was $48.40, one of the good prices displayed after the much-favored Doeskin won the first race. It seemed that everybody and their cousins had coupled Doeskin with a horse in the third race. However, the right one proved to be Nora's Grace, one that couldn't get out of her own way last out, in the mud. Her individual price today was $20.80.

The judges had to separate Sun Camp, the choice in the second race, and the Tuleyries Star, a long shot in the closest finish of the day. The decision was in favor of the favorite.

Good Matches Usher in Semifinal of D. C. Women's Tennis

Favorites Win In Play for Local Title

By George Considine.

THE District of Columbia Women's Tennis championships, now in progress at the Columbia Country Club, whittled itself down to the semifinals yesterday in both singles and doubles divisions.

Cracking out with the greatest display of pyrotechnics seen in local women's tennis this year, dynamic Sara Moore, newly crowned City of Washington champion, trounced the redoubtable Clara Tabler, 6—2, 6—4. Miss Moore seemed invincible in all departments as she pounded shots off both sides with unprecedented power.

Although the initial set was one-sided, the hard-hitting Californian loomed as a vital factor in the second. Punctuated by stirring deep-court rallies, games went with service until 4—4. At that point the strain began to tell on Miss Tabler and running out the necessary two tallies was little more than a formality for the winner.

Mrs. Miller Loses.

Mary Cootes, Old Dominion champion and ranking player of the tournament had her hands full before disposing of Dorette Miller, long a topnotcher. To complete the inner circle, Mary Ryan romped through Frances Bassett, 7—5, 6—1.

In handily winning their quarter-final doubles matches the Miller-Moore and Cootes-Turney combinations appeared certain to battle it out for the title. Although Mary Cootes and Sara Moore are favored to gain the finals in today's singles matches their opposition, supplied by Mary Ryan and Bobsey Turney respectively, will be of the sternest sort with the chances of an upset none too remote.

First Half Pennant Taken by Hancock

Team Beats Cabbies In County League.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1.—Hancock won the first half of the Washington County Baseball League season yesterday by taking advantage of errors of the Cabbies to win, 6 to 1. The game was a pitching battle between Hinkle, for Hancock, and Springer, for the Cabbies. With the score tied in the seventh, Hancock took advantage of Alexander's error and went on to score five runs.

Williamsport defeated Mount Briar, 6 to 2, but the latter team finished second in a tie with the Cabbies, each with 8 games won and 3 lost, while Hancock lost but 1 of 11 games.

The second half of the season opens July 4, with some of the teams greatly strengthened.

Strasburg Faces Woodstock Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 1.—Strasburg will seek to regain its position in second place in the Shenandoah County League here tomorrow, facing the Woodstock Shamrocks in a game postponed due to rain last Friday. Woodstock by virtue of a win over the Edinburg nine yesterday went into second place as Strasburg dropped a 12-inning fray to the Mount Jackson nine, 4 to 3.

Tim Artz is expected to pitch for the Strasburg team and probably will oppose Jack Sheetz, Woodstock's ace. The game is expected to be the most bitter of the season.

Standing of the Shenandoah County League:

Furr Defeated By Rock at Stadium

TON ROCK, rugged Scranton, Pa., welterweight, hammered out a unanimous decision over Phil Furr in an eight-round feature bout witnessed by 1,700 fight fanatics at Griffith Stadium last night.

The District welterweight champion figured not at all in the battle until the last round when he stung Rock with a low right hand punch, which made the Pennsylvania puncher wobble, but did not send him to the floor. Furr swarmed over his conquerer while he still was feeling the ects of the illegal wallop, but Rock was on his feet and clearly entitled to the win at the bell.

Roger Bernard, the Flint, Mich., manhandler, won handily from Lou Fox, of New York, in a sizzling eight-round session of slightly mitigated mayhem laughingly called a boxing match. Bernard pummelled the New York lightweight's midsection continually, raising a welt on Fox's midriff and causing his own right hand to be raised as the signal that he had won a unanimous decision at the finish.

Bob Wilson scored a technical knockout over Johnny DeSantos in the fifth round of a welterweight battle scheduled for eight rounds. DeSantos started out like a house afire, but the Florida flurry, making his first start here since returning from Australia, beat out the flame with a left hook early in the second.

In the second, Wilson sent the rugged Boston boy to the canvas for nine with a left hook to the body, but it came too late in the round to give Beltin' Bob time to apply the finishing touches. DeSantos was down for nine again in the third from a left hook to the stomach.

Referee Muffs Count.

As he rose, Referee Sullivan became confused on the count and stopped the bout, thinking he had tolled off 10. The matter was quickly adjusted and the bout continued, with DeSantos biting the dust for another nine count from a left hook to the jaw in the fourth.

The loser was bounced to the floor for nine by a left hook to the body early in the fifth, came up and was floored by another and was on the canvas from a left hook to the jaw when his seconds sent the towel fluttering into the ring.

Joe Teems, pleasing Florida featherweight, took a unanimous decision from Julie Katz, of New York, in a two-man, eight-round supporting bout. The contest was hammer and tongs throughout with Teems having a slight edge in the hammering in practically every round.

Young Kid Norfolk and Tiger Roy Williams, a couple of very dusky middleweights, pried the lid off the card in a fast and furious four-rounder. Williams captured the unanimous vote of the judges.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

UP to the time of writing this there were no reports from anglers who hit the streams of Maryland and Virginia for bass.

The Shenandoah was reported as being clear above Harpers Ferry and the Potomac as being very muddy. A severe thunderstorm hit the mountain sections over the week-end and it may have spoiled things for a few days.

We took a bitter dose of our own "medicine" on Sunday and tried out the Potomac between Joe Fletcher's boathouse and the Little Falls. With us went Dr. Paul Hatch. We were after rockfish, but all we caught after hours of effort were niches among the rocks and it cost us every snelled hook we had and no end of sinkers and line.

Nobody among the dozens of anglers we saw caught any sizable rocks. Those which were landed didn't average 6 inches in length and should have been returned to the water.

That bit of water is as likely a looking black bass territory as we have studied, but we lacked casting equipment and had to forego effort for them. The stream was horribly muddy. We saw one old gentleman, however, land a bass on a minnow and his catch might have scaled 3 pounds.

Experienced anglers who frequent the Potomac contend that the big rock have finished spawning and are now headed back toward the sea. We'll admit it seems full of little ones, however, and we frequently saw them break water.

A few decent rocks were landed in the neighborhood of Tall Timbers and Colonial Beach yesterday.

Bay Only Fair.

It was a "hit or miss" week-end for bay anglers. The water was choppy and there was a wind that bothered many at certain points.

We talked to many returning parties and there were as many who landed no fish as there were who caught them. The recently plentiful croaker sulked and refused to bite in the way he has been doing the past few weeks.

The Gooses proved only fair. Southwest Middles were a washout. Plum Point seemed to have been the best about the bay. Tilghmans Island reported a few decent catches, including a few large black drum. Little or nothing was caught about Solomons until late Sunday evening.

Unusually warm weather was probably behind this decline in finny appetites. A good rain and things may improve again.

The only really good catch we learned of was that made by Bob May, president of the A. B. & W. bus line; Joe Otey, Arnold Freedley and Joe Trew. Fishing on the Gooses Saturday night they landed 175 large hardhead within the space of two hours. Later on, they tried Plum Point with fair success.

Trout Season Over.

The trout season in neighboring States ended in a blaze of glory for several local anglers.

Postmaster Bill Mooney and his old fishing partner, Andrew Dumaine, put in three days in the neighborhood of Monterey and Hot Springs, Va. They fished Cow Pasture and Jackson rivers with great success, bringing back a fine assortment of brooks and rainbow—all averaging better than 12 inches.

Although the trout season is closed now, there are bass in the upper reaches of these streams, above Harrisonburg. They won't last there very long, either, for the section is attracting many sportsmen.

Postmaster Mooney informed us that in all probability both Cow Pasture and Jackson rivers would be closed to anglers next season. Property owners along the streams have agreed to post them for their mutual benefit.

Nats Make 13 Hits, But Lose to Boston leased Bean to its Chattanooga farm.

All major league teams waived on Bean, who was a keen disappointment to Manager Harris after the even swap that sent Stewart to Cleveland. With Stewart a mighty factor in the Indians' pennant drive, Bean has been unable to win a single game that he started for the Nats, and was not impressive in relief roles. The big right-hander is subject to recall, however. He was a sensation in the minors in 1932 when he won 31 games with Toledo.

To Chattanooga the Nats also send Big Ed Remorenko today. The giant first baseman who had been playing in the Albany outfield is regarded as a natural hitter and Harris is eager to develop him in Chattanooga where he can play more regularly.

The release of Outfielder Fred Sington to Chattanooga also is expected within a few days. All clubs have waived on him.

Outfielder Jake Powell failed to join the Nats here today and will not meet the team until it reaches Philadelphia on July 4. The Washington club physician has ordered a complete rest for Powell's injured leg.

Post Mortems . . .

Dan O'Mahoney, the new heavyweight wrestling champion who dethroned Jimmy Londos, will make the first defense of his title in Atlantic City tomorrow night . . . the Danno will work against Joe Savoldi, who once threw Londos himself . . . Bob Walsh, son of Big Ed Walsh, the old White Sox spitball king, is playing with the Wilmington Pirates in the Piedmont League . . . Bob wanted to be an outfielder, but his dad persuaded him to become a pitcher . . . Both Joe Louis and Primo Carnera are on view in the Fox Movietone News at the Fox Theater this week . . . Ethel Barrymore is one of the most enthusiastic fight fans among the feminine stage stars . . . and Steve Cochran, the old maestro of the National Theater who will manage Miss Barrymore on an impending tour, is perhaps Washington's No. 1 fight fanatic . . . Israel Rogoff, a Chicago insurance man who is only 3 feet 11 inches tall, won a set of golf clubs in a selling contest conducted by his company . . . the clubs had to be made to measure and are probably the smallest matched clubs in the world . . . Rogoff, who takes his golf very seriously, shoots in the 90's . . . Lee Wycoff, the wrestler, was a pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals for five years and the Chicago Cubs for two years before he took to the mat.

ing weapon, proved to be the deciding factor. With it, the American either passed Austin entirely or sent the ball down so fast that the Briton couldn't handle it.

Many Games Deuced.

To give an idea of how close the match was, eight of the 18 games of the second set went to deuce and five of 12 in the fourth. There were only five love games, of which Austin won four, mainly by his superior service. Some of the points lasted so long the crowd couldn't resist cheering before the rallies ended, first one, then the other producing seemingly impossible recoveries.

Miss Jacobs' fourth round victim in women's singles was Mrs. E. C. Peters, of Great Britain, 6—2, 6—1, while Mrs. Moody, unexpectedly pressed, came from behind to whip Mlle. Slecna Cepkova, of Czechoslovakia, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2. Miss Jacobs will play Mlle. Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, in the quarter-finals, while Mrs. Moody is paired against Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France.

Other Matches.

While Crawford and Budge both were forced to battle all the way to reach the semi-finals, Perry and Von Cramm walked in handily. Berry, at top form, crushed the towering Czech, Roderich Menzel, 9—7, 6—1, 6—1, while Von Cramm was winning from Vivian McGrath, young Australian, 6—4, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1. It was Von Cramm who eliminated Gene Mako, Budge's doubles partner, in an earlier round. Budge will have a chance to avenge Mako's defeat.

The veteran French combination of Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon bowed to the prospective British Davis Cup team of George Patrick Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey, 9—7, 6—2, 6—4.

Wilmer Allison and Miss Jacobs reached the fourth round of mixed doubles with a straight set victory over K. Lund, of Germany, and Mrs. G. Lucas, of Great Britain, 6—1, 7—5.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 1.—Front Royal, after reconsidering its decision to withdraw from the Valley League, continued its winning ways over the week-end and approaches the half-way point of the first half this week with a record of eight straight victories and a two-game lead over the Culpeper Champions.

Front Royal beat Culpeper yesterday, 4 to 2, and nosed out Orange Saturday.

This week should decide the first half winner in the circuit. Doubleheaders will be played on July 4, in addition to the usual run of games.

Culpeper Loses Twice.

Culpeper suffered two defeats over the week-end. The champions were licked by the All-Stars and Heurich and their own moundsmen were the victims of poor support.

Charlottesville, with four straight victories, has climbed into third place only a game behind Culpeper.

The Heurich Brewers hold fifth place by virtue of their Saturday triumph over Culpeper after losing to Orange and Charlottesville. Harrisonburg played only one game and lost that to Charlottesville.

Orange defeated the Heurich club, lost a close decision to Front Royal and then walloped the Staunton tail-enders yesterday, 14 to 0. Tisdale allowed only three hits in the encounter.

Here is the heavy schedule for this week, which will test the pitching staffs and probably sharpen the batting eyes of the hitters:

Wednesday—Front Royal at Harrisonburg (night); Heurich at Charlottesville.
Thursday—Culpeper at Harrisonburg (afternoon and night); Heurich at Front Royal (two games); Orange at Charlottesville (two games); Waynesboro at Staunton (morning); Staunton at Waynesboro (afternoon).
Friday—Harrisonburg at Staunton (tentative).
Saturday—Waynesboro at Harrisonburg (night); Charlottesville at Staunton; Heurich at Orange; Culpeper at Front Royal.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1.—The Washington County polo team, which a week ago dropped two games to the Marshall, Va., team here, split its twin bill over the week-end at Marshall, winning Saturday's game, 6 to 5, in an extra chukker, but losing yesterday, 10 to 4.

The all-stars scored one in the opening frame and added three more in the fifth on two walks and an infield hit which loaded the bases and a throw which got away from Dracha at first. FREDERICK, Md., July 1.—Middletown set back Union Bridge in the lone County League encounter, 5 to 3. The fray was interrupted in the second inning for 40 minutes by rain after which the teams resumed hostilities. Middletown started like winners and scored twice in the first inning when Charlie Ramsberg belted a home run to left-center with a man on base. Union Bridge came back in the next frame with two when the downpour began. Middletown scored one in its half of the second and put over the winning tally in the third when Harold Remsberg reached first on an error, stole second and scored on Rudy's single.

A heavy rain ended a pitchers' battle between Bud Shilling and Paul Shaffer in the Thurmont-New Windsor game at the latter place in the fifth inning, without either team scoring. Shilling held Thurmont hitless and permitted but one man to reach first base. Shaffer was rapped for three hits after pulling out of a tight place in the first frame, kept the blows scattered and was effective with runners on bases.

Rain halted the Woodsboro-Brunswick game at the former place in the second inning with Woodsboro leading, 1 to 0, as the result of a home run by Paul Eaves. Both pitchers had allowed two hits. Taneytown was leading Emmitsburg at Taneytown, 2 to 1, when a deluge stopped the game in the second inning.

Year's Building Rise in South Is 92 Per Cent

Commercial Loans Are at Highest Level Since 1932.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 1.—An increase of 91.9 per cent in building permits in 20 cities of the Sixth Federal District in May this year over the same month last year was reported today in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank.

The May total was an increase of 19.7 per cent over April. For the five months of 1935 the combined totals show increases of 35.1 per cent over that part of last year, 186.7 per cent over the same months of 1933 and 68.3 per cent over that period in 1932.

Department store sales in May declined 2.7 per cent from April, but because of the longer month daily average sales declined about 6 per cent. Sales by wholesale firms in May averaged 1.9 per cent larger than in April and were 8.1 per cent greater than in May, 1934.

Consumption of cotton increased slowly from April to May, but on a daily average basis consumption in the country as a whole and in the cotton growing States declined 2.4 per cent. Employment declined from April to May by an average of one-half of 1 per cent and was 10 per cent less than a year ago.

Pig iron production in Alabama increased 9.4 per cent from April to May, but was .6 per cent less than in May, 1934. Naval stores showed further seasonal increases in receipts at the three principal markets, but small decreases were shown in comparison with May last year. Some improvement in naval stores demand was recorded because of lower prices early in June.

Total loans and investments of weekly reporting member banks in Atlanta, Birmingham, Jacksonville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Mobile and Savannah declined slightly from May 15 to June 12 and were $21,000,000 greater than on the corresponding report date last year. Commercial loans on June 5 were at the highest level since May, 1932.

3 Months Grace For NY Central

RFC Extends Notes for $15,600,000 Now Falling Due.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has extended until October 1, $15,600,000 in notes, due shortly, which it holds of the New York Central Railroad, in an effort to permit railroad officials and bankers to work out a plan for refunding its heavy bank debt.

The New York Central owes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $27,500,000, of which $15,600,000 falls due between July 1 and August 1. It owes New York bankers $62,500,000.

The RFC chairman will confer tomorrow with representatives of the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad and representatives of bondholders who have been endeavoring to agree on a program for reorganizing that carrier.

A plan has been submitted to the RFC, but Jones declined to discuss it until he can talk to the representatives of both sides.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Moved Forward Slowly In Dull Trading—Bonds Hold Steady—Wheat Advances Sharply —Dollars Harden.

By Carlton A. Shively.

Securities markets held a firm tone, with trading activity growing less and less, while commodity markets were inspirited by another sharp rise in wheat. September wheat at 87⅝ was 2¾ cents a bushel higher on the day. Bonds were dull, with little price change. Stocks managed to edge up a little on a turnover of not much in excess of a half million shares.

Stock trading was a matter of skipping and jumping around for likely places to turn a point or so. Briggs Manufacturing and Eaton were favored and both advanced into new high ground. Timken rose a point or two. New arrivals were well received. Greyhound, coming over from the Curb, was shoved up a point or so. Swift, also making its bow, held around the final sale on the Curb.

Public utility stocks made fractional gains. Telephone led the trading. Some of the utilities sold into new high ground for the year, but with the debate on the holding company bill still under way the market continued rather cautious. Rails were firm, with no sales taking place in a good percentage of the group up to the late trading.

Profit taking brought Radio down a point or so, the stock making up nearly 10 per cent of total trading. Westinghouse sold at the best price in two years in rising more than a point. Spiegel May Stern increased its activity and hardened. Du Pont and Union Carbide were good, but other chemicals weakened. Small gains were the rule among tobaccos, motors, foods and oils. Silvers weakened and so did the coppers. Gold shares stood by. International Nickel was sold down a point.

The mounting market for wheat helped Case, Deer, Harvester, Montgomery Ward and Sears, Roebuck. Standard Oil moved up a point. New high prices were paid for Safety Razor, Bank Note, Campbell Wyant, Columbia Pictures, Printing Ink, Midland Steel and Minneapolis Honeywell. Steel and the industrial leaders were steady to firm.

Steel Trade Recedes.

Industrial developments over the week-end were not especially encouraging. Some groups are keeping up their steel buying, but others have fallen rapidly. This week's operating rate for the industry, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, will be 32.8 per cent of capacity, a drop of nearly 5 points. The level still will be high, compared to the 23 per cent rate of a year ago, but it is about down to the point where steel companies operate at a loss.

Money markets were unchanged with the half-year operations and preparations for large cash withdrawals for the holiday. The Treasury financing was handled in a manner to affect but slightly the volume of excess reserves at the banks. Foreign currencies were dull, with dollars a little harder in tone.

Dullness in the security markets was duplicated by the lack of news bearing on the financial picture capable of stirring the imagination or of directing the flow of investment and speculation. Reports from Washington, even for the beginning of a new week, were unusually meager and cloudy. Investment markets and the banks were interested mainly in two measures now under discussion at the Capitol, and the current developments in both were confusing.

The question of whether the public utilities holding company bill will or will not contain the so-called death clause is being answered yes and no with clocklike regularity. Markets realize that the pendulum easily could stop on either side, and consequently trading in the utility issues is slack and will remain so until a final vote is taken. Actual adoption of a law with the softened provisions undoubtedly would give a fillip to all markets.

Reopening.

Better feeling would come partly because of the demonstration given that good sense and moderation still was possible in Congress in spite of the "must" program of the administration, but mainly because of the removal from early liquidation of great quantities of securities that probably would be hurt by an uncompromising law. The other legislative matter that interested the financial district, but about which reliable information still was meager, was the reported inclusion in the new banking bill of an amendment to the old banking act that would permit banks again to underwrite new securities issues.

Such permission is badly needed in the market, and will be more useful once offering of new issues gets under way. Eagerness of investment for the refunding bonds that have come to the market has eased the matter of underwriting, but such will not always be the case. Capital for the purpose is at the banks, but is available nowhere else. If that part of the new act becomes law, and if shortly further amendment of the new securities act takes place, the reopening of the capital market would soon break the log jam in the heavy industries.

Steel Operations Slump to 32.8%

Actviity Drops 4.9 PerCent in Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Steel operations for the current week are estimated by the American Iron and Steel Institute at 32.8 per cent of capacity. This is a decline of 4.9 points from the estimated level of 37.7 per cent for the previous week.

The decline, one of the sharpest recorded since the trend of production turned downward in the spring, is largely a reflection of mill curtailment in connection with the July 4 holiday.

The estimate for the current week compares with an operating rate of 39.5 per cent a month ago and 23 per cent a year ago.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 1 (AP).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Quotations on wool in Boston were fairly firm. Trade during the past three weeks has been steady and at a higher rate than in the first week of June. The steady demand from mills and the firm replacement market in the large producing States caused holders of spot wools to adhere quite firmly to current asking prices. Weakness of wool prices apparent during the middle of the past month have largely disappeared.

Louis Dodges Celebration In Detroit

Colored Heavy-weight Wants Quiet, "Crosses Up" Committee.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 1.—Joe Louis, who landed on Primo Carnera in New York with an explosion that shook the heavyweight picture, slipped into his home town modestly and silently today to "cross up" a would-be welcoming committee as neatly as he did the rambling Alp.

While a committee of civic and business leaders met at city hall to make final arrangements for a welcome befitting the 21-year-old fighter, Joe already had arrived and was at the home of his manager, John Roxborough. Then he visited his mother, Mrs. Lilly Barrow Brooks, at the new home he recently bought for her.

"Mom," he shouted as he came through the door, and then contritely: "Mon—I've been eating too many things I thought I wanted when I was training. I want to go back training again."

Committee Catches Up.

"Mom" just nodded, then handed Joe a big glass of milk. That's the way Joe is taken at home, and he likes it. All the adulation during the past few days has been bewildering. So after just "foolin' around the house" for an hour or so, Joe took the car and went for a ride. But the "boys" recognized him—in fact so many of them did when he stopped to buy some gas that Joe fled after getting only three gallons.

Then the welcoming committee caught up with Joe's manager.

"This is fine of everybody," said Roxborough, "but Joe is a young fellow and he hasn't the championship by a long shot. We'll be helping him more if we let him meet his problems alone."

So the celebration was called off. But Joe is likely to lose a decision to Mayor Frank Couzens.

"All celebrations may be off," said his honor. "But I demand that Joe step in here and shake hands. I won't take no for an answer, even if I have to call a policeman to enforce this edict."

Joe is going to upper Michigan next Wednesday or Thursday to train for his bout with King Levinsky in Chicago, but before he leaves he'll have to shake hands with the mayor and a few others in a little, semiofficial welcome.

"I want to see those Tigers play," said Joe. "Boy, I've missed them."

Seventy Enter Public Links Tourney

Champions Still Unsigned in Contest for Berths in National Play.

SEVENTY golfers already have entered the sectional qualifying trials for the National Public Links championship, which will be played next Monday and Tuesday at East Potomac and Rock Creek courses, respectively.

In order to make the field the strongest in history, the local municipal committee has decided to keep entries open until Wednesday night.

With the four low scorers in the 72-hole championship, which also is tantamount to the District municipal championship, to make the trip to Indianapolis for the national proper, July 29 to August 3, inclusive, Washington's best players expect to put in a week of intensive practicing. The successful four will go to Indianapolis as the guests of Seth G. Leoffler, golf consessionaire.

Entry blanks are available at Rock Creek and East Potomac, and there is no entrance fee.

First Day at Potomac.

The first 36 holes will take place at East Potomac. On Tuesday the scene shifts to Rock Creek, where the pressure will be on and the boys will go at it again for 36 holes.

Among those unsigned yesterday were the champion, John J. (Russ) Connelly, and George Malloy, former District municipal titleholder, both of whom are expected to enter before the deadline snaps them.

Firecrackers in the form of golf balls will pop Thursday at Washington Golf Club, where tournaments and contests will feature the annual Fourth of July program. Blind bogeys, match play against par, flag, miniature tournaments, driving, pitching and putting contests will make up the varied links card.

Duffers to Compete.

Attention, duffers! The annual women's duffers' championship will be played Wednesday, July 10, at Beaver Dam Country Club. Only women with handicaps of 16 or over may contest for the trophy, but the low handicappers may compete for other prizes. The entries close July 8 with Mrs. D. R. Hutchison, Metropolitan 5278. Entrance fee—50 cents.

Burke Edwards has conquered one of his jinx holes at Manor. And how he conquered it! A la Sarazen fashion—by holing out from the trap to the left of the green for an eagle three. He had half topped his second. The hole is a dogleg, 471 yards.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

ONE of the most dramatic events of the great Sepoy revolt against British authority in India in 1857 was the defense of the Residency at Lucknow by a handful of English soldiers, loyal natives, and volunteer civilians. Less than a thousand soldiers, aided by about 700 natives and a few score civilians, held out against the besieging hordes of revolting native troops that at one time numbered 60,000 men.

The defenders of Lucknow concentrated in the Residency when the siege began, holding out alone, with dwindling supplies, from June 30 to late in September. At that time a small force penetrated the hostile lines to join them, but no substantial relief came until the middle of November. All that time the defenders kept the British flag flying over their battlements—and even today, though the building is a mere shell, the flag still flies.

The Japanese, noted the world over for their love of exotic art, are without a word in their language to express the English equivalent of the word "art." The best they can do is use a compounded word borrowed from the Chinese. It is "bi-jutsu," "bi" meaning beautiful, elegant, or fine. "Jutsu," however, means trick or rule. Thus "bi-jutsu," the only word they have to express the idea of fine art, may also mean beautiful craft or elegant trick.

Imaginary Interviews—Greta Garbo.

Q.—In beginning this interview, you understand, of course, that it is wholly imaginary?

A.—An interview with me would have to be

Q.—Miss Garbo, why do you, of all movie stars, appear so adverse to publicity?

A.—I believe that even a picture star is entitled to a private life, even if she has to fight herself into the headlines to get it.

* * * *

Q.—As a matter of fact, is all this aversion to publicity on the level, Miss Garbo?

A.—That's the sort of question that makes me dread interviews!

* * * *

Q.—For a lady who is always fleeing the photographers, you do pretty well in the newspapers, do you not?

A.—So you've noticed that, eh?

* * * *

Q.—I think I'm beginning to see it all. It is your very hostility to newspaper pictures and interviews that has made you one of the most famous movie actresses. Am I right?

A.—Am I being interviewed or lectured?

Q.—If you had always consented to have your picture taken it would have been mere routine, and you would have received no more publicity than any other star, yes?

A.—Your perceptions are amazing.

* * * *

Q.—This policy of dodging the agencies of publicity has made you a legend, an international puzzle and a mystery, has it not?

A.—See! You are interviewing the Great Garbo when the Great Garbo always refuses to be interviewed.

Q.—Would you mind if I took your photograph?

A.—I would mind very much if I said I did not mind, and so would my public.

Q.—There, Greta, do you realize what I've just done? I've interviewed you and I've taken your picture for the press.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Theories Versus Hartford — By Harry J. Tuthill

Excuse me, I hear you speak of Oakdale...and a button you find at my door. Ah, like you say, it is the same color as the suit this Oakdale wear, eh?
Wait...Peggy, didn't you say something about Mr. Oakdale coming upstairs to get you a pair of gloves the evening Gus and Ollie left?
Well yes, he did run upstairs for me, but...
So! And how that fellow looked me right in the eye when he say he know nothing about my papers. Ha ha!
How long was he up here, Peggy?
Well...:
Oh Peggy, please don't hem and haw about such a serious business. The truth can never hurt an innocent person. Never.
Listen, why argue about mere theories? Let's get Hartford here and have him explain everything. What's his number, Ped?

Depositor Sues For MoreFunds Of Closed Bank

Court Hears FurtherAction to Recover From the District National.

A further effort to provide additional dividends for depositors and creditors of the closed District National Bank was begun in the District Supreme Court yesterday when a depositor, Hugo Herfurth, jr., 1362 Kennedy street northwest, filed suit to recover half of a $750,000 account that was paid in full while other depositors received only 50 per cent of their claims.

The account was in the name of the Philippine Islands Gold Standard Fund, of which Secretary of War Dern was trustee. When the bank crashed in 1933, the entire account was paid to Secretary Dern, who had taken the precaution to guarantee the payment by compelling the bank to put up securities to cover it.

The United States Court of Appeals ruled Saturday, in the case of the Commercial National Bank, that unless there was explicit statutory authority, officials of semi-governmental funds could not require national banks to guarantee their accounts by the posting of securities.

Herfurth said he had $4,200 in the District National when it closed. He and other depositors were given half of their deposits while the Philippine fund and other accounts were paid off in full. The suit asks that all accounts which were paid in full be required to restore 50 per cent of their deposits so that all depositors would be on an equal footing. Norman R. Hamilton, receiver of the bank, will be compelled to disclose all such accounts if the suit withstands attack. The law firm of Douglas, Obear, Morgan and Campbell represented Herfurth.
